OUR THOMPSONS IN MAINE, NEW HAMPSHIRE AND THE WEST.

PREFACE.

This is the story of a sturdy, honest, witty, patriotic and talented family. It is like that of many others of the name who have starred the history of Great Britain and America with noble achievements along many lines. And hosts of other Thompsons, as sturdy and gifted as these, have devoted their time and talents to the possession of lands—of which they have taken the best of care. Hence this book is largely the story of family migrations to the shaggy forests of Maine, to the fair fields of the West, and the sunny slopes of the Pacific, that broad acres might be theirs. It is a magnificent record that, though the author of this book has carefully studied the history of many of these acquisitions, he has found no slightest trace of any Thompson using unfair means in his quest. And at his country's call these precious acres and the homes upon them have always been left behind. When James Thompson moved to New Meadows, near Brunswick, Me., he made that whole region glow with patriotism when the news of the battle of Bunker Hill reached him in the field by the river. This is the story of all neighborhoods where these Thompsons have lived. Not till the last note of war had died away did they go back to the fields and forests which had such a charm for them. Find any Thompson who is a brilliant scholar, successful in the law, or along any line of work, and he is holding firmly to some island, or plot of "God's green earth." Let his country need him tomorrow and in the gray dawn his steps will ring down the pathway of duty. An old Thompson coat-of-arms lies before me. It shows that through long generations the family has been what it is today.

This book holds much about the noble Thompson women and of those who wisely chose Thompsons for husbands. Read the chapter on the descendants of Lieut. Hugh Mulloy and his wife and you have a picture of what these women have ever been, and what a precious heritage they gave to all the generations after them; and where a Thompson woman has not chosen to marry, the neighborhood where she has dwelt has arisen to call her blessed because of her unfailing charity. The brilliant career of Emma Eames is sketched as showing the talents of this race from which she sprang.

The author of this book has carefully examined every Thompson record and legend and has given the story of the ancestry as clearly as he could. He is still searching in Great Britain for more light on this matter. The results will be given in due time. He has gathered many other Thompson records, which may be printed later on.

This book, on which so much time has been spent in the last eight years, is now published with many grateful thanks to the hosts of friends who have helped upon its pages.

Of that which has ever piloted the family Alonzo Thompson of Denver, Col., has well written:

“The guidance of Hope is a star on our way,
A beacon of light which points to the day
Whose curtain ne'er falls in the gloom of the night,
We follow it still, and the pathway is Right!”

EDMORE, N. D., November 22, 1906.

CHARLES N. SINNETT.

CHAPTER I.

THE THOMPSON ANCESTRY.

After reading with the greatest care every story of the Thompson ancestry which has been handed down among the descendants, and searching many other papers along these historical lines, we give, by the author's kind permission, the summary of Rev. Dr. E. S. Staekpole in his "Old Kit-tery, Me., and Her Families." He carefully searched all old documents which could throw any light on this matter.

There is a tradition that Robert Thompson was the emigrant ancestor of the Thompsons of Durham, N. H. He may have been the one who witnessed a deed in 1652. Thompson's Point, just south of the Coeheeo River, was so called as early as 1644, and probably in 1635. Thompson's Point House was taxed in Dover, N. H., in 1648. The name of the owner is not given. Perhaps he was deceased.

- (1) William Thompson appears in the records soon after this. Mr. John Seales of Dover, N. H., says he came from England in 1633. He received a grant of land in Dover, N. H., in 1656. This was laid out, March 17, 1658/'59 "beyond Cocheoco Logg Swamp." Nov. 8, 1715, John Thompson, Sr., of Dover, conveyed to John Tuttle fifty acres of land which "were granted to my father, William Thompson, by the town of Dover." It lay beyond Cocheoco Log Swamp, "bounded on the south by Bellamy Bank River." There is no evidence that William Thompson ever lived on this grant. On Oct. 15, 1656, a grant made to John White in 1651, was assigned to William Thompson. It was in Kit-tery, a short way below Sturgeon Creek. Several indications suggest that he had married the daughter of John White. In 1659 William Thompson was presented at York Court "for rebellion against his father and mother-in-law." He bound himself to the court in a bond of £20 "that hee will be of good behavior towards all men, especially towards his father and mother." (State copy of Court Records, Vol. I, page 331.) William Thompson died in 1676, and his estate was appraised, June 22 of that year, at £52 and 18s. He left twenty-three acres of land, a house and orchard in Kittery, Me., and fifty acres in Dover, N. H., which he gave to his sons, William and Robert, and to John White. His wife had probably died before 1676. He left children, whose ages were given in 1677 as follows:

- (2) John Thompson, aged 18; m. Sarah Woodman.
- (2) William Thompson, aged 16; probably m. Mary Lovering.
- (2) Robert Thompson, aged 13; "living with Toby Hanson in Dover."
- (2) James Thompson, aged 11; m. Elizabeth Frye.
- (2) Alexander Thompson, aged 6; m. Anna Curtis.
- (2) Judith Thompson, aged 2.

Rev. Dr. Stackpole's sketch of the above children is also given here, as it shows some items of interest.

- (2) John Thompson, the first child mentioned above, m., between 1678 and 1680, Sarah, daughter of Capt. John Woodman of Oyster River, Durham, N. H. He gave a bond in 1684 for the proper administration of his father's estate and to provide for "James his lame, impotent brother." March 30, 1708, John and James Thompson, "sons of William Thompson late of Kittery," conveyed the home-stead at Cold Harbor to Francis Allen. The deed was witnessed by Jonathan Woodman, Robert Huckins and Daniel Kincaid, all residents at Oyster River. John Thompson's will was probated July 24, 1734. Wife, Sarah, survived him.
- (3) John, m. Mary Davis, daughter of Ensign John Davis of Durham, N. H.
- (4) Sarah Thompson, m. Abraham Scales.
- (3) Jonathan, m., Jan. 23, 1717/18, Sarah Burnham of Durham, N. H.
- (3) Robert, m. Abigail Emerson of Durham, N. H.
- (3) Sarah, m. Samuel Hill of Durham, June 12, 1718.
- (3) Hannah, m. Moses Stevens of Somersworth, N. H.
- (3) Elizabeth, m., July 6, 1727, Eleazar Clark of Wells, Me.
- (3) Mary, m. Hubbard Stevens.
- (2) William Thompson, "living with Richard Otis of Dover in 1677," probably m., on the 4th of Sept., 1682, Mary Lovering, supposed to be the daughter of John Lovering of Dover. He lived in what is now Somersworth, N. H.

He had a son, William, who sold to Samuel Alley, Aug. 30, 1735, land that belonged to his father, William Thompson, deceased. This son, William, d. before Dec. 8, 1749, when Samuel Alley conveyed twenty acres in Rochester, N. H., to Elizabeth, widow of William Thompson, and her children.

- (2) Alexander Thompson m. Anna Curtis, daughter of Thomas Curtis of York, Me. He had a grant of land in Kittery, Me., 1694; d. July 13, 1720. Widow, Anna, administratrix of estate, Oct. 4, 1720.
- (3) Elizabeth, m. John Allen of York, Me.
- (4) Elizabeth Allen, b. Oct. 2, 1718; m. David Avery in 1742.
- (3) Abigail Thompson, m. John Garry, or Geary; published Oct. 21, 1720.

(4) Huldah Thompson, b. Dec. 29, 1744; m., 1767, Jacob Emery.

(4) Dodavah Curtis Thompson, b. March 31, 1746.

(4) Jonathan Thompson, b. May 31, 1748; m. Lucy McIntire.

(4) Esther Thompson, b. June 1, 1751; m. Nicholas Fernald.

(3) James Thompson, d. Oct. 22, 1724.

(2) James Thompson. We now come to this son of the Thompson ancestor in whom we are most interested. He was born in 1666, according to the clear statement in his father's deed that he was 11 years old in 1677. As is noted in the statement of his brother John, "he was lame and impotent." But it seems clear that he grew from this early weakness into a manhood of the sturdiest type. The bond which his brother gave to provide for him was carried out in the same faithful and loving manner in which many Thompsons in the long years since then have fulfilled such pledges to their kin and neighbors. James Thompson was a tailor by trade. Land was granted him in Kittery, Me., in 1694 and 1696, for the records state that James Thompson, on Feb. 1, 1709/10, late of Kittery, but now of York, sold these lands. It is said that land was granted to him in York, Me., in 1701, and that he removed thither prior to 1719. The York, Me., records have the following, "York, Oct. 23, 1717, laid out and bounded to James Thompson a tract of land whereon he now liveth, being on both sides of the highway that leads towards Barwick from York Bridge, which said James Thompson purchased of his brother Alexander Thompson, for forty acres, Jan. 4, 1713/14." In 1727, James Thompson moved with his family to New Meadows, Brunswick, Me. James Thompson was married in Dover, N. H., by Rev. John Pike, March 3, 1700/01, to Elizabeth Frye, daughter of Adrian Frye, one of the early, sturdy settlers at Frye's Point, Kittery, Me. She was evidently a woman of great strength and ability.

List of the children of James Thompson furnished by Miss Sarah A. Thompson of Topsham, Me., with this note: "I send this copy of the records from the family Bible of my grandfather, Ezekiel Thompson. It differs, in the number of children of his father, Capt. James Thompson, from all other records found of that family, but you can verify it from the list of the names of these children in the own handwriting of Captain James, which you have already copied." Help with this list was also furnished from the records which were gathered, March 5, 1838, by Gen. Jedediah Herrick from the town clerk of York, Me., and from Mr. Joseph Thompson, who was the only one of the Thompson name living at York in 1838:

(3) Judith Thompson, m., July 1, 1724, John Smith of York, Me., and had a large family.

(3) Alexander Thompson, b. at Kittery, Me. Ezekiel Thompson in his Day Book says: "He lived in Brunswick, Me., before the Indian wars. He lived to be over 80 years old. He had no learning, but he was a hardy, honest, industrious man. He had several daughters, but only one son, James Thompson." Owned at New Meadows, Me., lot 40, 100 acres. M., May 20, 1731, Sarah Grover of York, Me., daughter of Matthew Grover.

* * * * *

(4) James Thompson, b. York, Me., Dec. 9, 1735. Ezekiel Thompson says, "He died in Wales, Me., leaving sons, Alexander and William, and several daughters." M. —— Anderson, who m. (second), John Arno of Monmouth, Me.

(5) Daughter, m. Ebenezer Crosby of Hampden, Me.

(5) Daughter, m. Timothy Crosby.

(4) Tamsin, m. "Philip Jenkins and moved to Wales, Me., near Monmouth. The son of David Jenkins and Mercy Thompson."—Ezekiel Thompson.

(4) Elizabeth Thompson. Ezekiel Thompson says, "She died an old maid."

(4) Mercy Thompson and Mary Thompson. These two are added to the list of children by the Rev. Dr. E. S. Stackpole.

* * * * *

(3) Capt. James Thompson, called Jr. in some old records; b. Kittery, Me., Feb. 22, 1707; d. at Topsham, Me., Sept. 22, 1791; m. Reliance Hinkley, Mrs. Lydia (Brown) Harris and Mary Higgins. (Full records of his family on pages 16 to 43, Chapter II.)

* * * * *

(3) Cornelius Thompson, b. York, Me., Oct. 14, 1709; d. 1792; m. Hannah Smith of York, Me.

Ezekiel Thompson says: "My Uncle Cornelius had six sons:

- "(4) Thomas, who moved to Plattsburg, N. Y.

Children of second husband:

- (4) Philip Jenkins; lived in Wales, Me.; m. Tamsin Thompson, daughter of Alexander Thompson and Mary Grover.
- (4) David Jenkins.

(3) Joseph Thompson, b. March 23, 1713/14; d. before 1759, as his deed shows. Lived at New Meadows and Sebascodegan Island, Harpswell, Me. He was in the latter place in 1756. Ezekiel Thompson says: "My Uncle Joseph lived and died on Sebascodegan Island. It is said that he was as strong as two stalwart men. He had four sons." M. Mary Hinckley, daughter of Dea. Samuel Hinckley of Brunswick, Me. It was perhaps his widow who m., Feb. 14, 1765, Isaiah Webber. He had lot 49 at New Meadows, 78½ acres.

(4) William Thompson, m. as his first or second wife, Miss Robbins of Dover, Me. It is probably the earmarks of his cattle which were recorded at Harpswell, Me., May 30, 1774.

(4) Joseph Thompson, Jr. Earmarks of his cattle recorded at Harpswell, Me., June 27, 1774; m., April 23, 1774, Sara Webber. Rev. Dr. E. S. Stackpole: "On April 16, 1773, Joseph Thompson and his wife, Sarah, gave a deed of 18 acres of land to James Stackpole, 'said land being a majority of the Lot No. 15, in the first division, and being a part of the real estate of my late honored father, and falling to my share as set off to me by men chosen by the Judge of Probate.' This land bordered on the New Meadows River, on Sebascodegan Island."

(4) John Thompson, d. at Bowdoin, Me.; perhaps m., Dec. 27, 1781, Lydia Small.

(4) Capt. Cornelius Thompson. "He was very active in the Revolutionary War. He first served as a private in the army for awhile until his term of enlistment expired. Then he went on board a privateer, and, some time before peace was declared, he commanded a fine armed brig, and proved himself to be a prudent, courageous commander. After the Revolutionary War closed he moved to Salem, Mass., and from thence to Mount Desert, Me., where he carried on navigation."

(5) Daughter, m. Mr. Robbins of Dover, Me.

(4) Judith Thompson, b. Brunswick, before her father moved to Sebascodegan Island, Feb. 8, 1743; d. Thomaston, Me., April 13, 1797; m., May 18, 1767, James Stackpole, who moved to Thomaston, Me. There were many and sturdy descendants, who are widely scattered over the country." These records will be found in the "Genealogy of the Stackpole family," by Rev. E. S. Stackpole.

(4) Margaret Thompson, m. Mr. Toothaker.

* * * * *

CHAPTER II.

Capt. James Thompson of New Meadows, Brunswick, Me., and his descendants.

His line: (1) William Thompson: (2) James Thompson of Kittery, Me.

(3) Capt. James Thompson, b. Kittery, Me., Feb. 22, 1707; d. Topsham, Me., Sept. 22, 1791. Wheeler, in his "History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, Me.," says of him, "He came to Brunswick from Biddeford, Me., about 1739, and settled on the New Meadows River."

In 1757 he was in Capt. John Getchell's company, with his brothers, Cornelius and Alexander, and with Samuel Thompson. He was selectman at Brunswick, Me., 1748, 1752, 1753, 1754 and 1757. He was a dealer in general merchandise, and some of his account books are in the possession of his great-great-grandson, Mr. Charles Sproull Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis. A few records of sales are herewith given from this ancient book:

"1737. 8 bushels of meal at 13 shillings, 5 pounds & 4 shillings.

"1738. Sold two dozen buttons at 15 shillings. A jacket and breeches at 4 pounds & 10 shillings. A cow at 11 pounds. Fifteen pounds of beef at 7 shillings & 6 pence. Half a load of hay at 2 pounds. "1744. One bushel of peas at 12 shillings and 6 pence.

6 bushels of meal at 3 pounds and 2 shillings Feb. 18,

1744. To one day's work of myself and oxen, 1 pound and 6 shillings. To one yoke of oxen for one day, 8 shillings.

To mending fence two days, 1 shilling. One bushel of potatoes 7 shillings.

"1745. Half a bushel of peas at 12 shillings. To use of grindstone, 16 shillings.

"1749, Sept. One barrel of rum, 30 pounds. One barrel of flour, 15 pounds. Five bushels of meal, 8 pounds and 5 shillings. Two pounds of candles, 12 shillings. Ten pounds of flax, 2 pounds. 8 pounds of Sheeps wool, 4 pounds.

"1749. Three handkerchiefs, 30 shillings."

Mr. Charles Sproull Thompson says: "From the old account book it seems that James Thompson was a cobbler, did some farming, and had scows on the New Meadows River. He prospered well, and became a man of much importance. He was distributing colonial gunpowder to his scattered neighbors about the time when these entries close. I have his commission as ensign in Revolutionary Army, which is signed by Gov. Shirley of Massachusetts."

In 1741 he owned at New Meadows, Me., Lot 34, 100 acres.

Capt. James Thompson m. (first), April 13, 1732, Reliance Hinckley, who d. May 23, 1751; she was the daughter of Dea. Samuel Hinckley, who traced his ancestry to Governor Hinckley of Massachusetts, who came with the early settlers to Plymouth. The line is thus given: (1) Samuel Hinckley; (2) Samuel Hinckley; (3) Gov. Thomas Hinckley; there were ten children of this first marriage; m. (second), Dec., 1751, Mrs. Lydia (Brown) Harris, who d. Feb. 10, 1764; she was of Ipswich, Mass., and was a sister of Lieut. Benjamin Brown; there were six children of this second marriage; m. (third), March 22, 1764, Mary Higgins, who d. May 23, 1790; there were no children of this third marriage.

Children of Capt. James Thompson and Reliance Hinckley:

- (4) Elizabeth Thompson, b. March 13, 1733; d. July 21, 1766; m., Aug. 8, 1752, Daniel Weed of Newbury, Mass. "They were both buried on Great Island, Harpswell, Me., where they had made their home after their marriage; these parents d. within a year of each other, and their six children were thus doubly orphaned and they were adopted by their uncles and aunts; Mrs. Reliance Edgecombe of Saco, took Patience Weed."
- (5) James Weed, b. New Meadows, Me., July 17, 1753.
- (5) Reliance Weed, b. Oct. 7, 1754, m., Nov. 21, 1771, George Brown of Georgetown, Me.
- (5) Patience Weed, b. Sebasseodegan or Great Island, Harpswell, Me., Aug. 3, 1756; m. Thomas Chamberlain.
- (6) The daughter, Reliance Chamberlain, came on a visit to her mother's aunt, Jemima Ham, and she married her eldest son, John Ham.
- (7) Reliance T. Ham.
- (5) Lydia Weed, b. June 23, 1758; m. Samuel Welch.
(A Thomas Weed of Thomaston, Me., m., July 16, 1777, Annie Williams. He may have been of this family.)
- (4) Brig.-Gen. Samuel Thompson, b. New Meadows, Brunswick, Me., March 22, 1735; d. Topsham, Me., May 16, 1798; (63 y.). He was buried in the old cemetery at Ferry Point, Topsham, Me. When he had laid out this graveyard he said, "It is where I can go by land and water." But when the railroad bridge was placed across the river all those who had been interred in this quiet place were removed to River View Cemetery in Topsham. The general's remains were easily identified, as he had been buried in a coffin bound in brass and adorned with a brass plate. His bones were placed in the same grave as those of his son, Humphrey. In 1903 a Revolutionary soldier's marker was placed on his grave by the Sons of the American Revolution. He is said to have moved to Topsham, Me., in 1784.

He was licensed to sell tea in 1763, as a retailer in 1772 and 1774 and as an innholder in 1773. He was very successful in business and is said to have been worth $35,000 when he died. A little less than one half of this amount was in real estate, of which he owned the most in Topsham, though he possessed considerable in Bowdoin, and some in Bath and Brunswick. We shall get a still clearer idea of his business ability if we consider the troublous times in which he lived, and that in the tax list of 1758 his real estate was valued at but four pounds and his personal property at ten pounds and eighteen shillings. In 1763 his taxable property was, real estate seven pounds, two oxen, one horse, one cow, two swine, thirty-nine vessel tonnage and three pounds income on trade. What he gained from these humble beginnings was done by the strictest honesty, as, in the midst of the many abusive stories flung against him by his political enemies, there is but one that lays a finger on his business fidelity.

In the days in which General Thompson lived it was impossible to obtain much education at school, though the people of New Meadows sent to Boston when they could for the best instructors of those times. Yet no one ever saw him give one mournful look over this, or heard him tell what he might have done if his early environment had been better. He pored eagerly over the few books which he could secure, and was ever ready to learn of all whom he met and from every changing scene of his life. Once he heard a person say, "What a pity that man never had a better education!" He turned quickly and replied, with his brightest smile, "If I have no education, perhaps I can furnish a few ideas to those who have been in the schools."

While attending the General Court one of the lawyers handed him back a paper which he had written, requesting him to read it. "I wrote it for you to read, not to read myself," he said. One of the members of that same Court said to him, "If your education had been good you would have been a great man." But this earnest plea could not lead him to shed one tear over his past. He answered, with his face radiant with fun and hope, "If I had your education, I could put you in my pocket." And this noble man, like many others who have borne his name, made of all deficiencies in his early training an inspiration to help every boy and girl he could to the best and fullest education. His mind was so full of this that one day when he was walking in Brunswick with some gentlemen who were absorbed in other things, he pointed enthusiastically to a piece of land which they were passing, and said, "That was intended by the God of nature for an institution of learning." That same spot became the location of Bowdoin College, to which he gladly donated land. He was also a member of its first board of overseers. And when he died the board of the college attended his funeral in an earnest, grateful body, for well they knew what a friend this famous school had known in him.

Judge Freeman wrote of Samuel Thompson, "He was a portly man, not of very tall stature, but somewhat corpulent, and apparently of a robust constitution."

Illustrations of his ready wit have already been given; and every occasion of his life served as a background on which these brilliant flashes shone out in the most kindly manner. When he was in the House of Representatives he often excited the mirth of his fellow members. In the most strenuous days of the Revolutionary War he lifted many a burden from the hearts of his fellow patriots by his bright sayings. Amidst the peals of laughter which followed, these dark clouds were rolled away which the most powerful arguments could not have robbed of their ominous knells of the downfall of America.

And he was never the man who wished to say the bright things himself. Much that he said was only for the sake of waking up the latent powers of merriment and hope in others. And when any keen shaft was aimed at him no one was more ready than he to see all its force. Once, when a member of the General Court, he was crossing a toll bridge leading into Boston, when the bridge-keeper demanded toll of him. Toll was not required of the members of the Legislature and the brigadier replied, with some dignity, "I belong to the House, sir." The toll man made answer: "Belong to the House! I should think you belonged to the barn." Then the brigadier's merry laughter rang out as he nodded his head. After that his favorite suit was one of gray broadcloth, brushed in the neatest manner.

Nathan Goold of Portland, Me., has well said in his most interesting pamphlet on Brigadier Samuel Thompson: "His long service to our country, much of it without compensation, renders us under obligations to his memory. Recognizing his services, the war department has recently named one of the batteries that comprise Fort McKinley on Great Diamond Island in Portland Harbor, 'the Thompson battery.' The armament consists of three eight-inch and two six-inch guns, mounted on disappearing carriages. When Samuel Thompson was but sixteen years old he appears in local history as a 'centinel' in Capt. John Getchell's company, from Aug. 14 to Sept. 14, 1751. He had a service of over four weeks of faithful scouting and guard duty. In 1757 he was a member of the train band, under the same Captain. At a Town meeting held in Brunswick, Me., Nov. 17, 1774, Samuel Thompson was chosen moderator. At that same meeting he was elected Captain of the town military Company with Robert Dunning as Lt. and Thomas Thompson as ensign. He was a member from Brunswick of the three Mass. Provincial Congresses and participated at Concord when men and means were voted to make the beginning of the Revolutionary war. He was also at the head of the Committee of Safety for his District. The records all clearly show that he occupied a position of prominence with his associates at these Congresses. On Oct. 13, 1774, he was appointed one of the committee to wait on Gen. Gage on the disturbed condition of the Province. Oct. 21, 1774, he was made one of the committee to obtain the names of those accepting appointments under Parliament, and the same day was appointed on a committee on the non-consumption agreement. Dec. 7, 1774, he was appointed a committee to represent Harpswell, Me., to prepare a paper on the number of that town's inhabitants, and the extent of the commerce of the colony. Dec. 10, 1774, he was appointed on a committee for Lincoln County to ascertain the state of the militia. Mch. 29, 1775, he was on a committee to bring in resolves in regard to accepting appointments under Parliament and in publishing their names. The Provincial Congress on Apr. 11, 1775, ordered that Col. Thompson be desired to immediately repair to Brunswick, Casco Bay, Woolwich, Georgetown, and other places of interest, to intercept the work of one Edard Parry who was supplying the enemy with masts, spars and timber. He at once went with twenty resolute men and seized Parry and compelled him to give bonds with the penalty of two thousand pounds to abide in the town until the pleasure of Congress was known. They also made the enemy pay for their refreshment—which cost 42 shillings in legal money. This was before the Revolutionary war had actually begun. And the terror which spread among the Tories was increased by many other sturdy deeds.

“Ten days after the battle of Lexington Colonel Thompson wrote a letter from Brunswick to the Committee of Safety at Cambridge which is still preserved in the Mass. Archives. The penmanship is fair and his autograph is creditable. He had then been a selectman of Brunswick from 1768 to and including 1771. He was a delegate to the Cumberland County Convention of Sept. 21, 1774, at Falmouth Neck, now Portland, to consider the alarming state of public affairs and was one of the committee who drew up the resolutions that expressed the people's sentiments, of which it has been said that they compared favorably with any resolutions of that time. He had been the moderator of their town meetings, had just been appointed on the committee of inspection, and had been added to the committee to petition the General Court. The letter is as follows:

“I this minute have an opportunity to inform you of the State of our affairs to the Eastward; that we are all Stanch for our country, Except three men and one of them is Deserted, the other two are in Irons; as to the vessels which attempted to Convey Stuff to our enemies are stopt, and I am about to move two hundred of white pine masts and other Stuff got for our Enemies' use. Sir, having heard of the Cruill murders they have done in our Province (At Lexington and Concord) makes us more Resolute than ever, and finding that the Sword is drawn out first on their side, that we shall be animated with that noble Spirit that wise men ought to be, until our Just Rights and Libertys are Secured to us. Sir, my heart is with every true Son of America, though my Person can be in but one place at once, tho' very soon I hope to be with you on the spot. If any of my Friends inquire after me, Inform them that I make it my whole business to pursue those measures Recommended by Congreses, we being upon the Sea Coast and in danger of being invaded by Piriats—as the 27th of inst there was a boat or barge came into our harbor and river, and sounding as they went up the river.

"Sir, as guns and powder is much wanted in this Eastern Parts and also Provisions, Pray, Sir, have your thoughts something in this matter against I arrive, which will be as soon as business will admit. Sir, I am, with the greatest regard to the Country, at heart, your Ready friend and Humble Servt.

"Samuel Thampson.

"'Brunswick, Apr ye 29, 1775.'

"The effect of this letter is clearly seen from the fact than on the 9th of the following May the Council and House of Representatives ordered that a barrel of gunpowder be delivered to Col. Thompson from the commissary stores at Falmouth for the towns of Harpswell and Brunswick, he to account to them for the same. He carried the powder to the captains before May 31st and they were ordered to deliver it to the men when necessary.

"The British vessels then cruising along our coast were a constant menace to the peace of the fishermen and farmers who dwelt near the seashore and on the islands. They impressed men into their service, appropriated stores and resented remonstrance by burning buildings. The insolence of the British officers was almost unbearable and they were sincerely hated, none more so than Capt. Henry Mowatt of the Canceau, who in Apr., 1775, was at Falmouth protecting Capt. Thomas Coulson in the rigging of his mast ship, much to the annoyance of the inhabitants."

Dr. G. A. Wheeler in his fine History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, Me., gives the following account of the plan to break up this oppression of the enemy: "In May, 1775, occurred what is locally known as 'Thompson's War.' For some weeks previously, Col. Samuel Thompson, Col. Purington, Capt. John Simmons, Aaron Hinkley, Esq., John Merrill, Esq., Thomas Thompson and James Potter, had been holding secret meetings at the house of Aaron Hinkley, and had concocted a plan, first suggested by Col. Thompson, of seizing the British warship Cunceau. Samuel Thompson was chosen Colonel, and John Merrill and Thomas Thompson were chosen Captains. Capt. John Simmons was appointed commodore. To prevent a premature disclosure of their plans, all the roads leading to Portland were closely guarded and none allowed to pass unless sworn to secrecy. Notwithstanding this, some intimations of their designs reached the ears of Mowatt. The original plan was to procure a vessel of suitable size to carry a company of about seventy men; to disguise the vessel as a wood coaster; to conceal the men in the hold; sail for Portland in the night, go alongside the Canceau and board her immediately. The rendezvous was to be New Meadows. The disclosure of the plot somewhat altered their arrangements. They sailed from New Meadows on the night of May 8th, and landed on the morning of the 9th in a grove of thick trees at a place called Sandy Point. There were about fifty armed men, each wearing in his hat a small bough of spruce. Their standard was a spruce pole with the green top left on."

Mr. Nathan Gould, in his excellent history of Brigadier-General Thompson, which should be in the hands of all members of the Thompson family, continues this story: "Their camp, on the back side of Munjoy Hill, was between Tukey's and the railroad bridge, in a thick grove of pine trees where the men were concealed from view. Sentinels were posted and Peletiah Haley was sent into the town for information. Those who passed that way were taken care of for a time. About one o'clock, as Capt. John Merrill and two of his sentinels were walking near the shore, they saw Capt. Mowatt, Rev. Mr. Wiswell of St. Paul's Church, and the ship's surgeon, land and walk up the hill. They seized and carried them to Col. Thompson, who received Capt. Mowatt's sword, which he immediately returned. The news of all this soon reached the town's people and caused consternation. The camp was visited by prominent citizens who strongly urged the release of the prisoners. Col. Thompson and his men refused to do so, they contending that the war had already begun and that Providence had put the captives into their hands. As night was approaching it was decided to take the prisoners to Marston's Tavern, which was done under the escort of Col. Thompson's men and the Falmouth Neck Co. The tavern stood in what is now Monument Square, where the Am. Express office now is, but back from the street. The two companies were drawn up before the door, where they remained. The excitement was at its height. Lt. Hogg, the sailing master of the Canceau, threatened to burn the town if Capt. Mowatt was not released within two hours. It is said that Col. Thompson, having a slight impediment in his speech, replied, 'F—f—fire away. For every gun you fire I will cut off a joint of Mowatt.' Gen. Jedediah Preble said that two guns were fired without shot and that they frightened the women and children to such a degree that some crawled under the wharves, some ran down cellar and some out of town. Such a shrieking scene was never presented to view here.

"Evidently by a previous understanding or by the alarm, Col. Edmund Phinney's regiment assembled in town and there was so much talk of rescuing the prisoners that two or three companies were put under arms to prevent its being accomplished. The fact was the people of Falmouth Neck, at that time, were not ready for the rebellion against the British government. The timid property owners and the Tory element were the prominent people of the town and not until they felt the iron hand of British tyranny the next Oct., when their town was burned by Capt. Mowatt, did the people of all classes have a common cause. Then there was no hesitancy, and old Falmouth made a proud record of her people to the end of the war.

"Col. Thompson, of course, was considered the cause of the tumult and many of the leading citizens appealed to him to release Mowatt, and every argument was used to effect it. The most convincing one, no doubt, was that there was a great scarcity of corn in town and, if the harbor was closed at that time, there must be great suffering. Capt. Mowatt was in favor with the leading town's people and they of course thought a gentleman had been outraged. About 9 o'clock that night the prisoners were released on parole to return the next morning, Gen. Preble and Col. Enoch Freeman pledging themselves for them. Capt. Mowatt did not return the next morning at nine as promised, and the sponsors were confined. The reason Mowatt gave for not fulfilling his agreement was the fear of his own life. Col. Thompson and his men were much disappointed by this turn of affairs and called upon Gen. Preble and Col. Freeman for refreshment for the soldiers, which they provided at the cost of about fourteen pounds. Whereupon they were released, the next day but one. Thompson called upon them to pay for the time and expense of the men, amounting to 158 pounds and 18 shillings, which they refused to do. All this enraged Col. Thompson and his associates, who seized all the goods they could find belonging to Capt. Coulson and Sheriff Tyng, and levied on Capt. Jeremiah Pote, all notorious Tories. Enoch Hillsley contributed refreshments but we find no complaint from him. The soldiers carried off one of Coulson's boats and another belonging to Capt. Mowatt from under his guns and hauled them nearly over to Back Cove.

"They neither returned anything nor gave up Calvin Lombard of Gorham, who fired a brace of balls at Mowatt's vessel, although demanded by that officer. All this has come down to us as 'Thompson's War,' and properly so. Gen. Preble said then, 'Mowatt never will fire upon the town in any case whatever.'

"After the release of Mowatt the officers who had resolved themselves into a board of war voted that Mowatt's vessel ought to be destroyed, and a committee was appointed to consider in what manner it should be done. By the most strenuous efforts of the people of Falmouth Neck they were prevented from carrying out their purpose. After the burning of the town the next Oct. the people were no doubt aware of their mistake. If they had destroyed the vessels in May the town would have been saved. The history of Brunswick well says, 'A year later the plan would have been a success.'

"The goods which were 'sacked' in Falmouth were accounted for formally to the General Court, Oct. 21, 1776, and instruction asked for the disposition of the same. It was not a case of plunder. None suffered but the Tories. There were about 600 soldiers in the town at the time, and most of them had gone before the night of the third day, having feelings of great indignation against the inhabitants of Falmouth Neck. They said the town ought to be laid in ashes and spoke sneeringly of the 'Falmouth gentry.' If the capture could have been carried out, Casco Bay would have been the scene of one of the most brilliant events of the Revolutionary War. Soon after the soldiers left the town Mowatt weighed anchor, and with Coulson went to Portsmouth, N. H. But he did not forget to return and burn Falmouth. Col. Thompson and his men were greatly disappointed, but they bravely turned their energies to other noble work for the country which they loved so well."

It has been well said of Bridgadier Samuel Thompson: "He was a leader among men throughout his life, and one of great integrity. He possessed no mean power of debate and could express himself tersely and vigorously. His manner was outspoken and vehement but he was a grand leader, and running over with zeal and patriotism. After the Revolutionary War he filled many minor offices and served on committees of importance and was ever a faithful public servant whose integrity was never questioned in any history of his time."

(4) Ezekiel Thompson, b. New Meadows, Me., Sept. 16, 1757; d. March 25, 1832. "Ezekiel Thompson, Esq., deceased Meh 21, 1832 at ten minutes past 2 o'clock in the morning. He had his senses to the last and dropped off easy." He was collector of the internal revenue and postmaster at Lisbon, Me. He also settled many estates. He was a very prominent and useful man. In the day book which was kept by him were found many things of historical interest relating to the Thompson and Purinton families. This is in the possession of Miss Sarah A. Thompson of Topsham, Me., to whom and her cousin, Miss Hattie A. Purinton, are due many thanks for their long and careful searching of old records and for the copies which they made of these.

In the day book mentioned above Mr. Thompson gives the following sketch: "Ezekiel Thompson was born in that part of Brunswick which is called New Meadows, in the County of Cumberland, State of Maine, on the 16th day of Sept., A. D. 1757, and was the son of Capt. James Thompson who was born in Kittery, in the County of York, in sd. State, on the 22nd day of Feb., 1707, who having had three wives in the thirty-two years; by the first two he was blessed with nine sons and nine daughters and he deceased in Topsham on the 22nd day of Sept., 1791. The said James Thompson was the son of James Thompson who was born in the County of York (in the town of old York). Lydia Thompson, wife of said Capt. James Thompson, and mother of said Ezekiel, was born in old Ipswich, in the County of Essex, and was the daughter of Benjamin Brown of the said Ipswich. Said Ezekiel Thompson was married by Rev. Samuel Eaton, 15th of Feb., 1781, to Priscilla Purinton, who was born in the said New Meadows on the 29th day of October, 1759, and was the daughter of Col. Nathaniel Purinton who was born in Cumberland, and deceased in Topsham in 1788. Said Nathaniel Purinton was the son of Deacon Humphrey Purington who lived in Georgetown, now Bath, near the turnpike and New Meadows River, and was born Truro, Cape Cod, and was deceased (drowned) at Gorham, Mass. Priscilla Purinton, wife of said Nathaniel, and mother of said Priscilla, was born in Cape Elizabeth in the County of Cumberland, in said State and deceased at Harpswell. She was the daughter of Mr. Thomas Woodbury and Priscilla his wife of Cape Elizabeth and formerly from Beverly, Mass."

The following is also taken from the day book: "1827, Sept. 16. Sunday. This day I am seventy years of age. I lived of my time about 24 years at New Meadows, Brunswick, Cumberland Co.—about 16 years in Topsham, in County of Lincoln—23 years in the village of Little River and about 7 years where I now live, about three quarters of a mile northerly of said Little River Village. Hezekiah B. Thompson and Joanna now lives with me. Charles and John Holman now live in Topsham. Lydia Herrick at Lewiston. Reliance Tebbetts at Little River. Priscilla at Lisbon, near the Factory. My wife is about 68 years of age. We have lived together about 45 years."

Much help was found in an old Bible published in 1780, found among the papers of Ezekiel Thompson. Miss Sarah A. Thompson found an old paper from this, carefully wrapped up and marked, "Children's ages." The birth of the first child of Ezekiel Thompson was found in another record. Charles Sproull Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis., has his old family Bibles. Ezekiel Thompson m., Jan. 4, 1781, Priscilla Purinton, b. Oct. 27, 1759; d. at about ten o'clock in the morning, Sept. 7, 1835; daughter of Col. Nathaniel Purinton and Priscilla Woodbury.

- (5) Abner Purinton Thompson, b. to them on the 6th day of Oct., 1781, at New Meadows. On the 3d day of May, 1782, Abner, deceased at Topsham.
- (5) Lydia Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., March 15, 1783, on Saturday at 10 o'clock a. m.; d. March 13, 1830. Ezekiel Thompson says: "Lydia Herrick, wife of Capt. Oliver Herrick, of Lewiston, departed this life on the 15th day of March, in the year of our Lord, 1830, of a short illness of about 5 or 6 days. She died with her senses and without a groan or struggle, aged 47 years and 18 hours. She died on her birthday, lacking four hours." M., Dec. 24, 1809, Capt. Oliver Herrick of Lewiston, Me., b. July 21, 1782; d. June 4, 1852. He was captain in the U. S. army in the 1812 war. Miss Sarah A. Thompson has a letter written by him when he was a prisoner in Halifax Harbor. He was representative and senator to the Legislature, etc.; the son of John Herrick of Lewiston, Me., b. July 9, 1752; d. May 9, 1834, and who was for many years a representative in the Maine Legislature. His father m., March 14, 1780, Lydia Griffin of Falmouth, Me. The grandfather of Capt. Oliver Herrick was Maj. Israel Herrick of the line of Joseph Herrick of Salem, Mass. (Capt. Oliver Herrick m. [third], May 22, 1831, widow May Davis of Poland, Me., who d. Dec. 23, 1861. No children.)

Lydia Herrick Thompson and Capt. Oliver Herrick had eight children, but only the following records are given in the Herrick genealogy:

- (6) Ezekiel Thompson Herrick, b. Jan. 13, 1811; d. Feb. 5, 1861.
- (6) Elvira Herrick, b. May 4, 1813; d. Oct. 16, 1815.
- (6) Hannah Herrick, b. May 25, 1815; d. Jan. 20, 1851.
- (6) John Herrick, b. July 23, 1816; d. July 9, 1856; resided at Auburn, Me.; m., Oct. 21, 1840, Maria Little, b. Feb. 11, 1821; d. Dec. 25, 1867, daughter of Thomas Little.
- (7) There were nine children, but only these records are given: Maria Augusta Herrick, b. Aug. 1, 1841; d. Aug. 7, 1870; m., Aug. 25, 1864, John S. Adams, son of Rev. Aaron Adams and Harriet.
- (8) Kate Leland Adams, b. Jan. 21, 1867.
- (8) Nellie Little Adams, b. April 10, 1869; d. May 10, 1889.
- (8) Maria Herrick Adams, b. July 23, 1870; d. Aug. 17, 1870.
- (7) Lydia Thompson Herrick, b. Feb. 10, 1845; m., Dec. 7, 1870, Capt. Lewis Dwinal, b. April 19, 1840. In the Civil War he was captain in the Fifteenth Maine Volunteer Infantry, from Oct., 1861, to July, 1868. Afterwards resided at Bangor, Me. Son of Amos Dwinal and Sarah Sherburn Small. No children.

- (7) Eunice Thompson Herrick, b. March 21, 1854; d. March 23, 1855.
- (7) John Little Herrick, b. Jan. 3, 1854; d. March 23, 1855.
- (6) Oliver Herrick, b. Sept. 15, 1821; d. Nov. 18, 1878; served in the Civil War, Company H, Tenth Maine Vols.; d. of disease contracted while he was in the army; m., Jan. 1, 1857, Sarah Piper; no children.
- (5) Reliance Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., May 23, 1785, on Sunday at half past eleven in the afternoon; d. at Topsham, Me., Jan. 11, 1856; m. in Lisbon, Me., September, 1802, Isaac Tebbetts, b. Somersworth, N. H., Jan. 1, 1773; drowned in the Androscoggin River May 6, 1816. "He came to Maine when a young man, and finally met with business at Lisbon Falls, which was then known as Little River Village. He opened a store such as was kept in country villages at that time. He also became an owner in mills, etc. It was supposed that he went down to the river to examine a water privilege which he was intending to purchase and that he stepped on a rock which stood out a little from the shore and slipped from it into the water, which was very deep there and which had a swift current, which quickly carried him down stream. He was a good swimmer, and had divested himself of his clothing, but evidently became exhausted and perished. This was a great sorrow for his home and was a calamity which was widely felt outside of his family. Though not a church member, he was brought up in one of the finest old Congregational families. He was commonly called "'Squire Tebbetts,' though it is not known that he held any public offices."
- (6) Charles Tebbetts, b. Oct. 8, 1803; d. April 16, 1806.
- (6) Albert Tebbetts, b. Dec. 12, 1805; d., Dallas, Ore., Oct. 27, 1863. He was in business at Dallas several years; unm.

- (6) Harriet Tebbetts, b. Oct. 30, 1807; d., Brunswick, Me., July 4, 1884; unm.
- (6) Octavia Tebbetts, b. Oct. 30, 1809; d., Brunswick, Me., Oct. 15, 1884; unm.
- (6) Priscilla Elizabeth Tebbetts, b. Dec. 11, 1811; d., Bangor, Me., July 13, 1835; m. in Lisbon, Me., Jan. 1, 1833, Luther Dwinal, a merchant of Bangor, Me.
- (7) Sarah Octavia Dwinal, b. Nov. 21, 1833; d. Feb. 16, 1895; m. in Topsham, Me., Aug. 9, 1859, by Rev. A. D. Wheeler, Charles Carroll Everett, D. D., who was b. in Brunswick, Me., June 19, 1829; d. Oct. 16, 1900. He graduated at Bowdoin College in 1850; studied at Harvard Divinity School and at the University of Berlin. He was librarian, tutor and professor of modern languages at Bowdoin College from 1853 to 1857. After graduating at Harvard Divinity School in 1859, he settled over a Unitarian Church at Bangor, Me., occupying this position with great ability and endearing himself to everybody by his sweet character and white life for a period of ten years. In 1869 he became professor of theology at Harvard College, and in 1878 became dean of the divinity school. He published "The Science of Thought" (Boston, 1869); "Religions Before Christianity" (Boston, 1883); "Fichte's Science of Knowledge" (Chicago, 1884); "Poetry, Comedy and Duty" (Boston, 1888); "Ethics for Young People" (Boston, 1891); "The Gospel of Paul" (1892). His philosophy is deeply tinged with that of Hegel, but without sacrifice of his individual quality, and is much enforced and illustrated from his scientific studies.
- (8) Mildred Everett, b. June 3, 1860; d., Florence, Italy, March 26, 1903 (42y.). "The last of her line on both sides of the house."
- (7) Charles Tebbetts Dwinal, b. June 30, 1835; d. in infancy.
- (6) Charles Carr Tebbetts, b. Feb. 24, 1814; d., Charleston, S. C., May 22, 1834. At the time of his death he was on his return from St. Augustine, Fla., where he went for his health. He was a young man of great promise.

(6) Sarah Richardson Tebbetts, b. Aug. 18, 1816; m. in Topsham, Me., by Rev. A. D. Wheeler, Aug. 22, 1844, Dr. Hall Chase of Waterville, Me., who d. July 20, 1851.

(5) Nathaniel Thompson, b. Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1787, at about seven o'clock in the evening.

(5) Charles Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., the 30th of Nov., 1789, about half past six o'clock Monday evening; d. Topsham, Me., Oct. 4, 1866. "He was a banker and merchant and president of the Androscoggin Bank from its foundation in 1834 until the expiration of its charter." Miss Sarah A. Thompson, his daughter, sends the following sketch: "When he was about nine years of age his father moved to Lisbon, Me., where he remained until he was twenty-one years of age. He then returned to Topsham, entering the store of Porter and King as clerk. The following letter written to his father by Dr. Benjamin James Porter when Charles Thompson was about to sever his partnership with him gives a good picture of this noble man in his early years. It is needless to say that he always lived up to the reputation throughout his long and eventful life:

"TOPSHAM, ME., NOV. 6, 1811.

"Ezekiel Thompson, Esq.:

"I have this morning been advised that your son, Charles Thompson, has recently been appointed Deputy Sheriff. If I had been consulted I doubt if I should have advised the acceptance of that office. You may perhaps think that I should have been influenced by selfish motives, in the case of the advice which I should have given. It is true that I feel a deep regret in parting with him, as I have for some time felt him almost essential for my domestic trade. But I have other reasons which I think are not selfish. Among which are his talents for trade, which, in my opinion, are by few equalled. If he should engage in mercantile pursuits by himself, or with a partner, a few years would insure him a fine fortune. His integrity is of the highest stamp, and his industry and application are almost without parallel in so young a man. Sir, in whatever employment Mr. Thompson shall find himself I am confident that he will succeed to your expectations, and even to the most sanguine expectations of his friends. I am convinced that if he accepts this appointment I shall sustain a great loss. My esteem for him, and my desire to promote his interests, will induce me to acquiesce in any system which you and Mr. Thompson shall deem most interesting, reserving to myself the liberty of friendly interference whenever occasion may arise. With best wishes for your family prosperity I am, dear sir, Respectfully Your obedient servant,

“ ‘BENJAMIN J. PORTER.’

“His early earnings were invested in navigation with such success that he made it the chief business of his life in connection with his banking.

“He was an ardent patriot and was adjutant of the Third Regiment, First Brigade, and Eleventh Division, of the State Militia from 1812 to 1820. His commission was signed by Elbridge Gerry. It is in the possession of Mr. Charles Sproull Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis. He was considered so worthy of confidence in 1818 that the Circuit Court of Common Pleas placed the entire charge of the court house of Topsham, Me., in his hands, with authority to grant the use of it to any purpose which he considered proper. He never sought office, though capable of filling with honor to himself and advantage to the public any office which the community could bestow. He accepted no office but that of representative to the Legislature for a short period, and also a few minor offices which he did not feel at liberty to decline. Public life had no charm for him. His happiness was found in his home, where he was a devoted husband, a kind father, and such a lover of hospitality that his ‘latch string was always out.’ He was a good neighbor and a valued friend. He was deeply interested in the cause of education, not only for his own family, but he was a liberal contributor to it because of the large benefits which it would bring to others. He was one of the chief supporters of the Topsham Academy. Two of his sons were graduates of Bowdoin College with the highest honors, one of them spending two years in Europe for study and travel. Death claimed the other son in one short month after his graduation. He was a liberal supporter of religion and a decided Unitarian in his views. He was a man of the strictest moral integrity, one whose word was always to be relied upon, and he expected and inspired the same thing in others. His character was without a stain. He was shrewd, penetrating and calculating in his opinions in regard to men and things, and these always deserved and received the consideration of others. His advice in regard to matters of business was often sought and always deemed valuable.

“A voice at midnight came, he started up to hear,
A mortal arrow pierced his frame; he fell, but felt no fear;
His spirit with a bound burst its encumbering
    clay,
His tent at sunrise, on the ground, a darkened ruin lay.”

Charles Thompson m., May 14, 1821, Ann Emery Purinton, b. Topsham, Me., May 7, 1802; d. Jan. 1, 1873, the daughter of Humphrey Purinton and Sarah Emery, one of the noblest of women.

CHAPTER III.

Cornelius Thompson of New Meadows, Brunswick, Me., and his descendants.

His line: (1) William Thompson; (2) James Thompson of Kittery, Me.

(3) Cornelius Thompson, b. York, Me., Oct. 14, 1709; d. about 1792. Ezekiel Thompson says of him in his day book: "He had no learning, but was hardy, honest and industrious. He served in the Indian wars, 1757, in Capt. John Getchell's Company with Alexander, James and Samuel Thompson. He owned, at New Meadows, Me., in 1741, lots 37 and 38, 200 acres of land."

Wheeler, in his "History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, Me.," gives a picture of the house of Cornelius Thompson and furnishes the following description of it: "Probably the oldest house now (1877) standing in Brunswick is what is known as the Robert Thompson house. It is on the south side of the road to Harding's Station, and is the first house to the east after passing Cook's Corner. It was erected by Cornelius Thompson and was owned in the Thompson family until 1869. Cornelius Thompson owned the lot in 1738/9, and his first child was born in 1741. If, as is probable, the house was erected before the birth of this child, the house is not less than 136 years old. The chimney of this house is about four feet square at the top. The bricks are laid in clay. The flooring boards are from sixteen to eighteen inches wide, and are trenailed instead of being nailed. The west room, or parlor, is panelled on the sides and ends up to the windows, and is plastered above. The sides of the building on the north and east are bricked between the studs as high as the ceiling of the lower story. This was done for warmth. In the center of the parlor is a buffet, with shelves, etc., elaborately moulded by hand. The frame of the house is of massive timber. The door hinges are of wrought iron, large, clumsy, and of curious construction. The house faces the south. The present road north of the house was not made when the house was built. The occupants had a private road leading southeasterly to the New Meadows River Road, which was a short distance off."

Mrs. Medora Small of Oakland, Me., writes: "Wheeler gives a good picture of the old Cornelius Thompson house. I slept in it many times when I was a child. It was very quaint inside, with its big fireplace, winding stairs, 'buffet' in the parlor, etc. There used to be the framed silhouettes of all my grandmother's brothers and sisters. These may still be at the home of Miles Purinton at Harding's Station, near the bridge between New Meadows and West Bath. He may have other relics, as his grandfather, Robert Thompson, died in that house." This house was burned a few years ago.

Miss Sarah A. Thompson of Topsham, Me., says: "Thomas Grows of New Meadows, now deceased, helped to transfer the bones of Cornelius Thompson, with bones of his relatives, from the old graveyard on his farm to the cemetery. He said that he stood still in wonder when he saw the large size of the spine of Cornelius and mused, 'Many others of the family were built on this same pattern—and I wonder not that this sturdy race is famed for its "backbone" in every good cause of liberty and truth.'"

Mr. Weston Thompson of Brunswick, Me., writes: "A deed from Alexander Thompson to Cornelius Thompson appearing in the registry of York Co., Me., book 19, page 16, describes the grantee as of Biddeford, Me., and calls him a tanner. That deed must have been taken when Cornelius was a young man, after he left Kittery, Me., where I suppose he was born, and before he arrived in New Meadows, where he was in 1739. This deed was shown me by Charles E. White of Topsham, Me., whose mother was a Thompson, and who obtained the deed from the archives of Brigadier Samuel Thompson."

Cornelius Thompson m. Hannah Smith. Dr. E. S. Stackpole feels sure that she was the daughter of Nicholas Smith and Hannah Hadden, who were m. June 25, 1695, and that she was b. at York, Me.

Ezekiel Thompson, nephew of Cornelius, writes in the old account book of his father, Capt. James Thompson, which is now in the possession of Mr. Charles S. Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis., "The old gentlemen (Cornelius) and lady died about 1792." From this same account book are taken many of the records which follow, and which were most carefully written down by this same Ezekiel Thompson.

"Before he was twenty-one years old he went to Massachusetts, which was a long journey in those days. After working there awhile he shipped in a whaler at New Bedford, and made two voyages, which occupied four years, and which took him to the Indian Ocean, Madagascar, St. Helena, Africa, South America, and to the East and West Indies. Later he became an engineer on boats plying between Maine ports and Boston, Mass., which position he filled for many seasons. He finally settled on a farm in North Turner, Me. Before this he had lived at Bangor, Me., for a number of years. During the Civil War he was an engineer on a mail packet and transport, which took him to the Gulf of Mexico and to several Southern ports. In politics he was a staunch Republican from the first formation of that party. He was an uncompromising advocate of temperance. His marked characteristics through life were fidelity, industry, perseverance and opposition to shams in all forms. He had always been hardy and vigorous, never employing a doctor until he had a slight paralytic shock about two years before his death. This sickness injured his sight so that he could not read, which was a great drawback to his enjoyment, as he had always been a great reader. Still, he was very cheerful and courageous." M., in Bangor, Me., Sept. 23, 1845, Prudence G. Page, b. Freeport, Me., Nov. 5, 1823; d. "Gen. Jedediah Herrick was educated in Boston, Mass. By profession he was a civil engineer. He was captain and major in the 1812 war. He distinguished himself in action at the time of the burning of the corvette John Adams. Penobscot County, Me., was formed in 1806 and General Herrick was appointed its first high sheriff by Governor Story of Massachusetts. He was major-general of the Tenth Division of the Massachusetts Militia, Maine then being a part of Massachusetts, Dec. 17, 1816, and he resigned his commission in 1828. In politics he was a Federalist. He spent his last years as a man of leisure, devoting a great deal of his time to the study of geology and metallurgy. He assisted men of science. He was a man of unusual culture, and was widely known among the scientific and literary men of his day. The New England Historical Genealogical Register of January, 1850, says of him: 'He was the author and publisher of an extended genealogical history of the Herrick Family, full of loving and patient research and laborious investigation. He was also engaged upon the histories of the families of Preston, Haywood, Leach, Scales & Kilburn, from which he was also descended.'

- (7) Horace Hayden Eames, b. Shanghai, China, Dec. 19, 1863; m., June 18, 1890, Miss Hamilton of Hagerstown, N. J.
- (7) Emma Eames, b. Shanghai, China, Aug. 13, 1867. Johnson's Cyclopedias says of her: "Opera singer, born in China, where her parents, who were natives of Boston, were temporarily residing. She studied in Boston under local teachers. In 1883

she went to Paris and studied under Mme. Marchesi, and made her début there at the Opera, early in 1889, in Gounod's opera, Romeo & Juliette. In 1891 she appeared in N. Y. as one of Abbey's Company at the Metropolitan Opera House and made a brilliant success during the season, especially in Faust. These operas were taught her by Gounod himself. On July 29, 1891, she married Julian W. Story, the artist, who was b. at Walton-on-Thames, England, Sept. 8, 1856. He graduated at Eton (Brasenose College), Oxford. The son of Wm. W. Story, the famous sculptor." In the winter of 1906 she sang in "Aida" in New York City to a fine audience. When she is not in America her address is No. 7 Place des Etats Unis, Paris, France, and at Tore di Campagnilioni, Vallombrosa, Italy; in America, care of Metropolitan Opera House. Mr. Charles E. Hamlin, of Bangor, Me., who was a dramatic and musical critic in New York City when she made her début, says: "Emma Eames is easily the most notable figure among the women we have on the operatic stage, although Mme. Nordica is entitled to high rank. Mme. Eames has great temperament and passion, although she does not sink herself as completely out of her rôles as Nordica and other artists do. She builds big. She makes a quiet beginning, but after she fairly gets into the work she vitalizes the performance. Her voice is brilliant, strong and sufficiently tinged with sweetness. It has fine dramatic timbre. She completely fills the eye, and sometimes displays great dramatic power in her acting. But her fault is that she is too much herself—and yet she is a regal figure. Her performances are always interesting and moving, if not histrionically convincing." Mr. C. E. Hamlin also furnishes this sketch: "The father of Emma Eames was a lawyer, of Bath, Me., and Miss Eames spent a large part of her childhood in Bath and Boston. Her father practiced his profession in the international courts of Shanghai. Miss Eames gave early evidence of having a rare voice, and she began the study of music in Boston. Prof. John K. Paine, then the leading American composer and professor of music at Harvard University, was among the first to recognize her great ability, and he encouraged her to study for grand opera. She removed to Paris, where she resumed her studies, spending two years under Mme. Picciotto and others, learning stage deportment, studying the mis-en-scene of various operas, besides perfecting herself in the French language. She made her début at the Paris Grand Opera House March 13, 1889, before one of the most critical audiences in the world, in Gounod's opera, Romeo and Juliet. The de Reszke brothers were in the caste. She was just twenty-one and her success was a happy omen for her future. The directors of the Paris Opera House confirmed her engagement for the next two years. At the end of that time Miss Eames signed a contract to sing at Covent Garden, London, which was a promotion. The result was that Abbey, Achoeffel and Grau engaged her to sing an opera at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, where she made her début in 1891, appearing in Romeo and Juliet, the de Reszke brothers in the caste. Her success made her the leading American prima donna. She was regarded as the most beautiful Juliet the American stage ever produced. She revealed great vocal ability and exceptional dramatic temperament and histrionic ability of decided promise. Her greatest success was attained as Margarite in Faust, which was presented that and other seasons with probably the greatest caste with which the opera has ever been performed. She also appeared with success as Elsa in Lohengrin, as Eva in Die Meistersinger, as the Countess in the Marriage of Figaro, and in other rôles which evidenced her versatility. She has been connected with the Metropolitan Opera House for many seasons since her début and has always been a great favorite with the audiences. She is also a great favorite in London and other European cities. One instance of peculiar interest was her first appearance in Maine, October, 1905, which was a veritable triumphal tour."

His granddaughter, Mrs. Medora Small of Oakland, Me., writes: "I have some letters written by my Grandfather Holbrook before and after his marriage. In one of these he speaks of being mate with Captain Blakmar, and that the captain was very abusive to him and the crew. This letter was written from New Orleans, but the name of the vessel was not given. Another letter, dated Jan. 21, 1823, states that he is just starting on a voyage with Captain Farmley in the schooner Favorite of Bath, bound to Demarara and from thence to Coracao and then home. The last letter was written from Acquiri, St. Domingo, July, 1825, and in this he says that he hopes to see his home in six weeks. He speaks of his 'venture' as if he were captain of the ship. I have the impression that he died at sea while making this voyage which he mentions. In a letter dated Jan., 1823, he states that his brother Wm. was to come the next week with cotton and other things, and it also makes mention of his brother Ezekiel. In a letter of his dated Bath, Me., June 23, 1823, he says that he will sail on the morrow wih Capt. Riley for some of the Virgin Islands, and that he will return in Sept." - M. ## CHAPTER IV.

AMOS THOMPSON OF BOWDOIN, ME., AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

His line: (1) William Thompson; (2) James Thompson of Kittery, Me.; (3) Capt. James Thompson of New Meadows, Me.

(4) Amos Thompson, b. Brunswick Me., Sept. 3, 1749; d. Bowdoin, Me., Jan. 6, 1835 (86y.).

His grandson, Amos Thompson of Belleville, Ill., writes of him:

"He lived the greater part of his life on a farm about two and one half miles from Bowdoinham Village. He told me that when he settled there the country was covered with a heavy forest of timber. He said that the bears were so plenty that they would destroy the green corn when it was in the roasting ear, and would also kill the calves, sheep and pigs. He made a snare by bending down a birch sapling, and baiting it with a part of a sheep or calf that the bear had caught the night before. When he went to the snare in the morning he found that he had caught the bear by the hind legs, and the sapling was strong enough to lift him from the ground. The bear was standing on his fore feet with his hind parts in the air. He took his axe and killed him.

"He was eighty years old when I went to visit him, but he was still as straight as a man of thirty years, but he was very bald. He had his coffin made and placed up stairs in the brick house, so it would be all ready when it was wanted. But he did not need it for six years after he made it. I was much interested in looking over the house where this grandfather was born. It had a large chimney in the middle, so that there should be no loss of the heat from the fire. My grandfather told me that he was of English descent. In the fall of 1774 or 1775 he went with General Arnold from Maine to Quebec, for the purpose of capturing Quebec. But the plan was a failure. The army lay on the river below Quebec all that winter and came home in the spring without accomplishing anything.

"My grandmother, whose maiden name was Hannah Wooster, was quite a stout, large woman at that time and appeared to enjoy good health. She said that she was some mixed with French blood."

The following letter from Amos Thompson clearly shows his style of writing, as well as many other interesting things in regard to him. It was called out by matters pertaining to the family of his son, Abel Thompson, who had moved to Illinois some time before:

"Bowdoin (Maine) Monday, May 31st, 1819.

"Kind Respectable Sir:

"I have received your letter of the 2nd of April—last part—and am gratified to hear from you at such an early date, and shall endeavor to forward an answer according to your request. In the first place, sir, you inform me how and by what means I may become Administrator and Guardian of the children, which looks to me most reasonable, but, sir, as you inform me that my son Abel had the desire that the children should enjoy the benefit of his new settlement in that country, I should recoil from interfering in that business, but shall confide in your wisdom respecting my son's children and property to be managed for them according to your discretion. Sir, my age and many infirmities of body render me incapable of coming to see you, and the man that I have appointed to go on, namely Mr. Allen, has gone a great distance to the Eastward, so that matter is at an end. But if he had now been at home, under the consideration that my son's children were still to remain there, I should have been very far from recalling them if Mr. Allen had gone to see them. Sir, you inform me that my son died seized of about $16.00, which was all you found, which surprised me much, as he must have had when he went away from us more than $2,000.00, and what should become of it is a great mystery to me, without he meted help to those who moved at about the same time with him. Sir, I have heard that he requested to appoint Mr. Barker (his Christian name I cannot at present recollect), but Mr. Barker may likely inform you, Sir, if you have not come to the knowledge of it, and I hope, Sir, you will be very solicitous to see to the children that they have faithful guardians and places to live at where they may have the instruction that will be necessary for them, and, Sir, my desire for them is fervent, and may the God of the fatherless reward you, Sir, with the blessings of this life and that which is to come. Sir, there are some debts that are due to the Estate of my son from people that are living in our vicinity, and some of it may be collected. Sir, if you think convenient, you may constitute Ezekiel Allen, if you can do it legally, which would save you considerable pains and trouble, but as I am not at present able to say how that may be, I shall leave that matter entirely with you. Sir, you mention one note given by John Temple of $15.00. I suppose that he is living in Cincinnati. Sir, you must act your discretion and I shall remain satisfied.

"Dear sir, I have written you such things as at present flow in my mind, but I am loth to trouble you with such a long harangue, feeling, Sir, a great reliance on your wisdom and candor and shall leave the whole to you, and subscribe myself,

"Yours, with most profound respect,
"Amos Thompson.

"To Mr. Hugh McClintock, Belleville, St. Clair Co. Illinois Territory.

"P. S. Pray, sir, remember us to our dear grandchildren for whom we feel indissoluble ties of tenderness and respect. Say to them, as they are able to bear it, that they are dutiful and kind to those who have care of them, and to all around them, and to remember their Creator in the days of their youth. And say to Mehetable, as the first of age, that she remind her Uncle Barker's children that we remember them with the same tenderness and respect, and that grandfather and grandmother are now desirous to hear from you all as often as you can find an opportunity. And say to Mr. Barker and wife that we remember them with respect, and that we are enjoying the blessings of health as our age will permit. Hoping that these lines may find each of our dear relatives enjoying the same blessings. Betsy and Hannah and their families are in good health.

"Amos Thompson."

Hon. Horace Purington of Waterville, Me., a great-grandson of Amos Thompson, says of him: "He was a man of great energy and strong will. Nothing was too hard for him to undertake or overcome. He was a man of a mechanical turn and somewhat inventive. He built a saw and gristmill, and operated it for many years, thus accommodating the country for miles around. Many times have I heard the old men of the town tell of their going to this mill with their grists of corn, wheat and rye, which at first they carried on their backs for miles. Later on, horses could be used on the rough roads. Amos Thompson was high sheriff of his town for many years. Many rough men were in the country in those days, but no man too ugly for him to arrest ever crossed the borders of Bowdoin.

"He was a man of keen wit, and many are the stories which are told of the jokes which he played on others when he was sure they would do no personal harm, but fix some needed lesson in the minds of his neighbors. One year the town of Bowdoin offered five dollars per head for every wolf which was caught in the town. At the same time the neighboring town of Topsham offered the same sum for every wolf that was killed in the town. In a few days after this, Amos Thompson caught three wolves in Bowdoin, and promptly received the bounty which was offered for them. He then took the wolves to Topsham and killed them, and got the bounty there. His townsmen tried to get even with him by calling him 'Wolf Thompson,' but each time the nickname was used more and more people laughed at his keen wit. Both towns made their laws in regard to bounties for wolves to harmonize, for they well knew at what points the shafts of wit had been aimed. 'Days of argument would not have accomplished what a few jokes of his did.' was the ready verdict of all who knew Amos Thompson well."

Amos Thompson m. Oct. 15, 1774, Hannah Wooster, b. in Falmouth, or Gorham, Me.; d. Bowdoin, Me., Jan. 25, 1835 (84 y.). The marriage intention states that he was then living "without the bounds of the town of Bowdoin." Amos Thompson and his wife lived together 60 years, and her death occurred only four weeks after that of her husband. The records of the children were found in the ancient Bowdoin records. To this Weston Thompson, Esq., of Brunswick, Me., added Betsy, who died at the age of 12 years, and a child which died in infancy.

- (6) Amos Thompson, b. Bowdoin, Me., April 26, 1807; d. at the home of his son, Charles H. Thompson at Portland, Ore., Saturday evening, April 13, 1901 (93y., 11 mo., 17d.). His remains were taken back to the old Illinois home, where he had spent nearly all his life, and buried in the beautiful Green Mount Cemetery. Very impressive services were conducted by the pastors of the Baptist and Methodist churches, the large audience room being entirely filled with the old neighbors and friends. The choir tenderly rendered the most comforting hymns, and the organ selections by Miss Zoe Harrison were especially chosen for the occasion. Then the very large funeral cortége wended its way to the cemetery. Standing beside the open grave, the Hon. L. D. Turner delivered the following address:

"Uncle Amos Thompson was my friend, and I approach the story of his life conscious of one's weakness when he speaks of a friend. I loved him, as all did who knew him well, for to know him well was to love him more. My own gentle mother taught me to love him, for she knew him well. And his illustrations of the lessons taught me intensified my love. He and she were sheltered under the same roof, warmed at the same hearthstone, fed the same food, clothed by the same hands, educated in the same log schoolhouse and studied at home by the light of the same tallow candle. Their notions of the present life, and their hopes of the future life, were the same, and their strength of body the same, as they succumbed to death at the same time.

"Amos Thompson was born April 26, 1807, and died April 13, 1901. His parents came to St. Clair County in 1816. His mother protested against the journey, and remarked, 'I am going to my grave,' and her prophecy was fulfilled, as she and her husband died within two days of each other, in less than three months after their arrival in Illinois. After the death of his parents

he lived with a neighbor one year, and when he was ten years old, he made his home until he reached his majority, with John Stantz of Turkey Hill. On May 15, 1831, he married Irene Moore Charles of Twelve-Mile Prairie and went to farming in High Prairie. The wife died in 1852. His living children are Charles H. of Portland, Ore., Alonzo of Fullerton, Neb., Mrs. Theophilus Harrison of Colorado Springs, Col., and Cyrus of Belleville. He was three times elected to the Illinois Legislature, the first time in 1842, and succeeded himself in 1844 and was elected again in 1866. In search of a better climate, he moved to Oregon some five years ago, but he always called Illinois his home.

'He still had hopes, his long vexations past,
Here to return and die at home at last.'

"After a very long life of spotless conduct, that comes only from a heart by nature born of purest impulses, of perfect integrity, commanding and maintaining continuously a unanimity of respect from all classes and kinds of men with whom he came in contact and association, either in a private business way or in a public way calculated to promote the public weal, or stay the public woe, our loved friend, our long-time neighbor, our former citizen, our good, kind, dear old father, has reached the limits of life's boundary line and has closed his eyes in the everlasting sleep, and 'joined the innumerable caravan that moves to the pale realms of shade, where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death.' The grave is open and ready to receive and hide forever from our view that frank, placid countenance; that bent and bowed, yet strong and stalwart, form. But the memory of his many manly virtues, of his good deeds done, of his fatherly devotion, 'fadeth not away.' And if every one upon whom he hath bestowed a favor could place but a single petal of a rose upon his grave, it would be changed from a little mound of cold clay to a mighty mountain of sweet flowers. When the electric current flashed over the Rocky Mountain tops the information of his death, the tenuerest chord is touched and the heart bleeds, and as the story is repeated on the street a sympathetic chord is touched in every heart, and in silent cadence the words are spoken—Amos Thompson is dead.

"In the death of the oldest and charter member of the Octogenarian Club, the venerable and esteemed Amos Thompson, we mourn the loss of one whose memory we will cherish as long as friendship, founded on virtue and worth, is a cardinal principle of the human heart. His rectitude through a long life elicits our highest admiration. His sound judgment in all temporal affairs, his unswerving integrity in all his dealings with his fellow-men, and his broad charity, have stamped their impress on the community in which he has lived an honored and worthy member. Never a seeker of office, his eminent qualifications commanded the confidence of the discerning public and offices of trust and responsibility were conferred upon him, and in the faithful service rendered he merited their highest respect. Wealth that he accumulated through industry, frugal habits and fair dealing, stimulated no false pride in either feeling or action, but was employed by him in various channels for the benefit of others, and the needy were often and kindly remembered. His influence was always cast on the side of right, and his moral character was above reproach. His gentle manners endeared him to all, and to be numbered among his friends was an honor to be coveted. His kind remembrance of absent members gave evidence of his interest in their welfare and love for the brotherhood. His fair name, and noble example, are an imperishable heritage to his children, and the monument he has built in this community is more lasting than bronze or marble.

"Of this Octogenarian Club, whose memorial I have read, he was a charter member, and lived longer than any other member save one—Col. John Thomas, who lived a little less than one year longer than Amos Thompson. He was a man without enemies. He was loved and admired by everybody. He was the soul of honor and trusted all with whom he dealt. He was not a member of any church, but believed in the immortality of the soul. He was liberal in his views towards all denominations, and his motto was:

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see,
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

"He verified the old adage, which to him was a very familiar one, 'A punctual man holds his neighbors' purse strings.' At the early age of ten years we find him an orphan boy in a new country, among strangers, homeless, friendless and penniless. Twenty years thereafter we find him in possession of a home and a family, friends in numbers, and pennies in goodly quantity. And yet another twenty years and we find him comfortably located and pleasantly situated, but 'still achieving, still pursuing,' his name extending, his influence widening, his friends increasing, public confidence placed in him, and his voice is heard advocating the cause of the people in the legislative halls in this great and growing state.

"And in yet another twenty years we find him deprived of his wife, but he is not homeless now, for to him sons and daughters were born, and the unspeakable love with which he loved his wife was not buried in the cold earth with her lifeless body, but it lived on, and passed over into and strengthened his lasting, living love for his children and, though there was one vacant chair, the home circle was not broken, and he was not homeless, for his erstwhile home was their home, and their future homes were his home.

"And in this same twenty years not a friend that he had made was lost, not a friendship was broken,—but each one became a better friend,—and to this circle numberless others were added.

"And in this same twenty years not a penny earned in youth was lost in wild speculation or gambling adventures, but the penny once earned was judiciously invested and its increments added thereto. And yet, with all these things accomplished, he is not fifty years old and he lives yet nigh another fifty years before he passes into another life: and he goes on making new friends, and never losing an old one, does public service in many official ways, helps the needy. From his lofty mountain height of success he could take a retrospective view of his past, and could readily see and learn whom to help, when to give, and where to give. His charity was great, and it was not heralded in the public press. Of the poor of our city he was ever mindful, and was always willing to give liberally. With the Woman's Relief Corps he was prodigal. To them he would give fifty dollars, then the same sum, then double that gift. Surely these will feel the breaking of his purse strings.

In stature, Amos Thompson was short and stoutly built, with firm, erect walk, and his countenance was always peaceful. He had done no wrong and there was no heartache to rack his brain and distress his look. He was regular and temperate in his habits and exceedingly industrious. Labor was a pleasure. His education was limited to that of the earlier common school. Then things were rude, indeed, in our new state. But he was a great reader of history and a lover of the poets, and possessed a most wonderful memory. He had the genealogy of the kings and the battles of the nations, at his command, and the songs of the poets were on his tongue. Given the wonderful advantage of the present school, college and university, and the query is, 'What would he not have accomplished?' He was a good, successful and exemplary citizen. And the reason for all this can be expressed in three words, 'He did right.' The world loves and properly appreciates a right thinking man. Success obtained by any other than fair means is a bubble in the air.

"Old classmate of my mother, old friend of my father, I must bid thee farewell. Thou didst awake in the early gray dawn of the most wonderful century of all the ages; thou wert born on the northeastern coast of the most wonderful republic of all the nations, and at thy birth the restless, rolling waves of the Atlantic sang in their foaming spray thy lullaby. And as the bells in the steeples rang out the old century of thy birth, wherein thou hadst witnessed the most wonderful, marvellous discoveries and improvements, on the western coast of the wonderful republic, grown to be the greatest nation among all the nations, there thou didst fall to sleep, and at thy death the smooth, sinking waves of the Pacific sea, washing the most western shores of thy native land, sang thy requiem. And, as thou didst request it to be done, thy body is brought here to the cemetery of thy choice, in 'Sweet Green Mount,' there to be laid in the lap of mother earth. The light of thy star of life is not gone out, but only gone to shine as a brighter life in that world which has no ending. And as on earth thou didst see the worldly cities beside the shore-bound seas where the light of man shone on the streets, so now in Heaven,

'Thou dost see the Holy City,
Beside the tideless sea,
The light of God is on its streets,
The gates are open wide,
And all who will may enter,
And no one is denied.'

"May others like unto thee arise to teach the people and lead our people, glorify our republic and exalt our race, is my prayer at thy grave. For the love I bore him living, for the fragrant memory I cherish of him dead, I come to render this poor tribute of my affection and respect today: This, and more, he would have done for me."

The pall bearers at the funeral of Amos Thompson were Messrs. Hugh W. Harrison, Lee Harrison, Charles W. Harrison, John Heinzelman, William Heinzelman and L. D. Turner.

The Belleville (Ill.) Weekly Advocate adds a few facts which are not recorded in the above oration: "On the death of his parents, Amos Thompson found a home with a neighbor named Fowler. He then became an apprentice to John Stuntz, tanner and furrier, who sent him to school, and with whom he remained until he was twenty-one years old. He then learned the carpenter's trade with Mr. Fowler, and worked at it for about twenty years. In 1829 he assisted Mr. Fowler in building the Belleville Court House. In the early '30s he began purchasing real estate, and soon became the owner of large landed interests in St. Clair County, Ill., and in Missouri. After his marriage he was a farmer until 1852. In 1863 he sold his farm and retired from active labors, making his home with his children. He was one of nature's noblemen, gracious and generous to all, and possessed of a high and noble character. He was a Democrat at first, but became a Republican when that party came into power."

From the Oregonian of Portland, Ore.: "Probably no voter who cast his ballot for McKinley and Roosevelt in Oregon, Nov. 6, 1900, has a longer and more interesting record than Amos Thompson of Mt. Tabor, who will be 94 years old the 26th of next April. He went to the polls with his sons, Charles and Cyrus, of Belleville, Ill. Thus assisted, he was able to walk most of the way. Amos Thompson first voted for Jackson in 1828, and has thus cast nineteen ballots for presidents. He was well acquainted with Stephen A. Douglas and Lincoln."

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of April 15, 1901: "Amos Thompson made it a point to distribute his wealth as he went through this world. He did not like death-bed bequests or post mortem settlements of estates. Forty years ago he adopted this plan of giving his wealth as he accumulated it. It was a pleasure to distribute it among his children and see them enjoy the benefits of his labor and good management. In a certain way he made them stockholders in all his enterprises. When he amassed any considerable amount of money he would divide it among his sons and daughter, only reserving enough for his own needs. Before leaving Belleville, Ill., for Oregon, in 1896, he made a division of his wealth. It is said that each of his children received $10,000. Up to that time he had attended to all of his affairs."

The following letter from Amos Thompson, while he was in the Illinois Legislature, gives a good picture of his earnest work:

"Springfield, Ills., Feb. 3, 1843.

"Friend Davis:

"Permit me to drop you a few lines. I am enjoying good health, and have done so ever since I have been here, and hope that you and your family have been enjoying the same blessing. We have been in session now two months and we have done little, apparently, although it appears that the members have been industrious and have lost but little time, and these members are noted by those who have been acquainted with the Legislatures heretofore, for sobriety. You see no drinking going on here. Sixty-four members have joined the Washingtonians and there seems to be a great reformation here in regard to drinking. At one meeting one hundred and twenty men and women joined.

"We are trying to District the State. It is more of a job than I expected. We have too many men who want Districts to suit themselves. The bill is to the third reading in the House. I cannot give you the situation of all the Districts. Our District commences at the mouth of the Ohio, thence north up to Madison County, and the Third Principal Meridian is the East line. You have seen a description of it in the Belle-ville Advocate. But there are many alterations in the plan there proposed. The Democratic Party is very much divided respecting the Districting of the State. On other matters they have acted together as much as could have been expected.

"The last conversation which I had with you you wished me to try to do something in regard to the property that was exempt from execution. You concluded that it had a bad effect on the community. I was of your opinion, but the House of Representatives have gone and passed through their House the Bill exempting in addition to what is already exempt, one stove, two head of sheep, for each member of the family, and a spinning wheel, fuel,—for how long I cannot tell—and feed for a sheep, cow and calf, and several other articles. There is a wonderful spirit of relief here. I did what I could against the Bill, but it went through the House. It has not yet come up in the Senate. Whether they will concur with the house or not is uncertain. It is my opinion it will injure the honest part of the community, and we should not favor the rogues. An honest poor man wants the credit of all the property which he has in his possession. A bill has passed the Senate regulating the interest on money. The school money, according to this Bill, shall hereafter be loaned for 8 per cent lawful interest. In other cases it is to be 6 per cent. How it will go in the House I cannot tell, as it has not yet come up. If it can be defeated, the members from your County will all try to do it. Catlin in the Senate voted for the Bill. I consider that I have no more right to tell you what you shall loan your money for, than to tell you what you shall card your wool for, or the farmer, what he shall sell his wheat for. Demand and supply will always regulate the interest on money, and laws of that kind only tend to cause mankind to avoid the law in place of maintaining it. This afternoon we were at work on the Shawnee Bank and had some fine speeches. What will be the result is uncertain. Some of the members, I think, are a little squeamish. Time, as Burns the poet says, will determine. The Canal Bill has occupied some time and has not yet passed the House. Whether to vote for it or not I do not know. You have seen the plans from the Committee on Canals, I expect. I am afraid of it. I do not wish to sanction any measure that will involve the State in more debt, and the measure, from that Committee, I am fearful will result in nothing more. I am very tired of this place, but will be here till the last of the month.

"If you should see Samuel Stookey please to inform him if he wants his pro rata share of the bank notes that he sent up here by me that I expect the Bank will pay out the silver before I return and I can bring it to him. If he wishes he can write and I will bring either silver or paper.

Your friend,
"Amos Thompson.

"To William Davis, Belleville, Ills."

The following reminiscences of Amos Thompson were written by him in 1898, at his home in Mt. Tabor, Ore. A severe illness hindered him from completing them:

"Scenes in strong remembrance set,
Scenes never, never to return;
Scenes if in stupor I forgot,
Again I feel, again they burn."

—Burns.

"Feeling that some recollections of my early days, and how the families of Abel Thompson and Caleb Barker moved to this western country from what then was called the District of Maine, will be helpful and fully believing that such information would be appreciated and valued by those who follow us on the never-ending stream of life, I jot down the following:

"In the spring of 1815 my father was well situated in Maine, with no debts against him, and in possession of a well-stocked farm and a water saw-mill, and apparently lacking nothing but a contented mind, but that is everything in life. He had been reading of the state of Ohio, and some of his neighbors had moved there, and to satisfy himself he made the trip there. He started early in the spring of 1815, having previously placed his farm and mill in the hands of his son-in-law, James Grover. He went with a horse and carriage, and in passing through the Allegheny Mountains, the Indians stole his horse, which he never recovered from them, and from the place where the horse was stolen he made the balance of the distance to Ohio afoot. He returned from Ohio in the fall of 1815 well pleased with the country, and immediately set to work preparing to move.

"A few weeks after father left home, the saw-mill was burned up with considerable lumber adjoining the mill, which was a great loss to him. He never again rebuilt the mill, but rapidly went to work selling his stock and farm and preparing to move. Mother was very much opposed to leaving her friends and home in Maine, and often have I heard her expressions that she was going to her grave. But father was determined, as he said, to bring his children into a country where they would not have to labor as hard as he had worked for a living. Could he have pushed the veil aside which hid the transactions of the next thirty months from him, with what horror would he have abandoned his contemplated trip. ('Blindness,' says the poet, 'to the future kindly given, that each may fill the circle marked by Heaven.') For in less than thirty months from the time that they left Maine, father and mother were both dead, and their children orphans among strangers.

"By the middle of October, 1816, he was ready to start on his journey to his future home. Caleb Barker, a brother-in-law to father, and family agreed to go out with him. Barker's family consisted of himself, wife and five children; namely, Sally, Amos, Sybil, Adeline and Nelson. Father's family consisted of five children, Mehitable, Amos, Eleanor, Haines and Abel,—all healthy children, and I never knew father to be sick until his death sickness in Illinois. James Grover, wife and one child agreed to come out West with father. All three families, Barker's, Grover's and father's, prepared themselves with good comfortable wagons and teams, suitable to make the trip in the winter to Olean Point, at the head of the Allegheny River, where they expected to take water and go down to Cincinnati. Father disliked so much the hogs in the state of Ohio, that he procured three beautiful white guinea pigs to take along with him;—two female and one male. In traveling through the state of New York, the male pig was stolen and lost. The other two we carried with us to Illinois and they were sold at father's sale;—quite fine, large hogs. Mr. James Grover was living with my father when they were preparing to move, and his parents were very much opposed to leaving them. Father and mother wished their daughter, his wife, to accompany them to the new country. Grover had prepared himself with a good team and wagon suitable for the journey and the day was fixed for starting, and as Grover lived with father, the two wagons and teams started off at the same time together. Grover's team got the advantage of him and ran his wagon up against a log lying near the road, and it is said that one of the axletrees of his wagon was broken. At any rate, the accident so discouraged Grover that he gave up the journey, and bought him a farm nearby and settled on it and raised a large family. He and wife and several of his family are buried there, his wife living to be some eighty-eight years of age. After the accident to Grover, Barker and father proceeded alone on their journey. The first night after we left home, we stayed at Brunswick. From there the most direct road to Olean Point was taken, but winter overtook us long before we reached Olean, and when we arrived there we found many families waiting to go down the river when the spring would open. Father and Barker immediately proceeded to build a flat-boat sufficiently large to transport the two families to Cincinnati. Father being a ship carpenter was of great advantage in building the boat. By the time the river opened in the spring, their boat was ready and was the first boat to leave Olean for Pittsburg. On the boat from Olean to Pittsburg, father and Barker were the only men and we had quite a pleasant voyage to Pittsburg, though nothing of importance transpired during our voyage.

"We found Pittsburg, then the spring of 1817, quite a flourishing little city with foundries for the casting of large cannon, and factories for the cutting of nails,—the first that we had ever seen; also glass works and many other improvements, all of which were very interesting to me, a boy then of ten years of age, and father took great pains to let me see all the factories and novelties of the city. Our stay there was for but a few days as we wished to get to Cincinnati as soon as possible. The Ohio River, which was formed by the junction of the two rivers, Allegheny and Monongahela, was very high, and to my young eyes very beautiful, and many immigrants, like ourselves, were there to descend the river in search of homes in the South and West. I do not recall the exact date that we left the city, but our stay there was quite short. Our boat, containing but the two families, had not descended the river far, before we fell in company with a large flat-boat filled with immigrants bound for Louisiana or Mississippi States. They kindly invited us to lash our boats up to theirs, which we did, and in that condition we floated the entire way to the city of Cincinnati. The joining of the boats was a great pleasure to me, and in fact to us all, for I could run about at all times on both boats, and as there were boys on the large boat about my size, the passage down to Cincinnati was very pleasant to us all, old and young. Often have I looked back and recalled the passage down the Ohio River in company with that boat with much pleasure. On our arrival at the city, we looked around the city, which then, in the spring of 1817, was quite large and flourishing to my youthful eyes, with the first steam grist mill that any of us had ever seen, built partly in the river so that boats could load and unload right from the water, the mill being four stories in height, and turning out the flour rapidly. My father was much interested and showed me all about the mill he could. After looking the city over for a few days, father went some eighteen or twenty miles up what was then called Mill Creek, and rented a small home and five acres of ground. He rented the place of a man by the name of Fagan. There were several Fagan brothers and all owning mill property on that stream, called then Mill Creek, all of them being much respected and called Quakers. After father had plowed up the five acres of land and planted it in corn, he left it for me to cultivate and started for the territory of Illinois, as he called it,—Illinois at that time not having become a state. He said he wished to find a country where he would not have to labor so hard to clear out the land.

"Whilst he was gone, he visited Belleville and for some six weeks he worked for Jas. Tannehill of Belleville at wagon making, and while there he selected the place for his future home in Illinois. His object in the selection of a place was to find one where he could build a water saw-mill, as he was deeply impressed with the importance of having a good saw-mill, and several times before his death in the spring of 1818, pointed out the very spot where he intended to build the mill. His object was more for a mill than for farming purposes, I think, in his selection, although the land was rich and fairly clear and beautiful for cultivation.

"Soon after we arrived in Cincinnati, Uncle Barker and family crossed the river into the state of Kentucky and there he found employment until the return of father from Illinois. On the return of my father, which I think was the latter part of August, 1817, he disposed of the corn that was raised on the five acres of rented ground and then prepared to move to Illinois. At that time there was a man at Cincinnati by the name of Capt. Potter (I call him by that name as he went by no other). He lived in Maine on a farm adjoining that of my grandfather, Amos Thompson, and had left Maine some little time before we left. He and father and a man by the name of Capt. Sparks in company (whether Sparks helped in the purchase or not I do not know positively) bought a large keel boat, sufficiently large to carry six families, and as soon as they could get ready, all left for St. Louis.—Thompson with his family of seven, Barker's family of seven and Potter's family of six. (I think this man Potter was the father of our old neighbor Matthew Potter of High Prairie, for he and his wife died near where Matthew Potter lived.) There was also on the boat a family by the name of Poor, also from Maine, but of his family I knew but little. I think the family was small, probably not more than four or five. In the boat there were also some young men in addition to the families. There was a cousin of Potter's by the name of Reed Potter and another man by the name of Wolcott, and likely more, but the above I well recollect. It was about the middle of October, 1817, that we left Cincinnati for St. Louis. When a short distance from Cincinnati, we had an accident to our boat which caused a great fright among the people on the boat and delayed us on our journey for about thirty hours. We had been in the habit of running only in the day time and tying up the boat at night. The weather was clear and beautiful and the moon rose about eight o'clock and they concluded that as soon as the moon rose they would start out down the river, the boat having been tied up on the Kentucky shore to wait until the moon rose. As soon as it was up sufficiently bright, they pulled out into the stream, or intended to, but in drifting out we went sideways down stream, and before we got far from shore the boat struck a snag and stove a hole in the side and the water rushed in, alarming the people dreadfully. The point where the snag struck the boat was under the berth of Capt. Potter and he immediately seized a pillow and kept out as much of the water as he could. Being near to the shore the boat was run back and a plank was hastily put out so that the people could get off, for all thought the boat would surely sink, and you can imagine what a scramble there was with all trying to get ashore. One grown man by the name of Wolcott in walking out on the plank, fainted and fell into the water and they thought would have drowned had he not been helped out of the river. One young man by the name of Poor, got his little brother on his back, and had to use quite strong and unbecoming language and not suitable for a Sunday-school before he could reach the plank, but both he and his brother got to the shore safely. The people on the boat, excepting those who were to run the boat during the night, had gone to bed, and hastily in their night clothing, men, women and children, old and young, assembled on the bank, making a laughable appearance. I had got into my bunk and was awakened by feeling the boat strike the snag, which seemed to keel the boat over, but I had no trouble in getting ashore. Neither father nor mother left the boat, father going into the part of the boat to assist Mr. Potter in keeping out the water. Father had at that time a flat-boat lashed to the keel of the large boat, in which he had some food for his hogs, and by means of a large and long rope attached to the top of the mast of the keel boat, and fastened to the flat-boat, they rigged a purchase on that and keeled the boat over so far that the hole in the boat was above water, and in that condition we lay until morning, when father, who understood such work, soon had all things in good condition with but little damage done by the water that had run into the boat. We then proceeded on our journey and with a large sail made fair progress, though I hardly think we ran much of nights after that, though I do not distinctly remember. One day as our boat was passing along the Indiana shore, a man was seen making efforts to attract our attention. It was at a little town called the Rising Sun, and when we slowed up he asked us where we were going, and when we told him to St. Louis he said that was where he wished to go, and asked if we could take him and a small family aboard as passengers. We answered in the affirmative and immediately landed the boat. His name was William Fowler and he had with him his wife and one young child and an apprentice by the name of John Dunlap. They were from the northern part of the state of New York and were on their way to St. Louis. He had but little freight, a long chest of carpenter tools and two or three boxes filled with small and good chopping axes, which found a ready sale in Illinois, and some household goods such as bedding and clothing. They were taken on board and occupied the part of the bow of the boat where Barker and father were. We then had six families. The next town of importance after that was Louisville, at the falls of the Ohio River on the Kentucky side. At that time, the fall of 1817, there had been no work done by the government on the falls to improve the river, and to us the falls presented quite a formidable obstruction to navigation on the river. About two miles above the falls the boat was landed and a pilot proceeded to pilot us over the falls. Privilege was given to all who wished to leave the boat and walk around the falls, some two miles, and many who were on the boat got off and walked around the falls, and amongst them was William Fowler, but his wife and John Dunlap went over the falls in the boat. The families of father and Barker stayed on the boat. The pilot that we had was an old pilot and considered one of the best. His charge for taking the boat over was two dollars. At that time there were three chutes, as they called them, namely, the Indian or Middle Chute, and one on the Kentucky side and one on the Indiana side. Our boat took the Indian Chute. The pilot stood on the deck of the boat, and his object was to get as much headway on the boat as possible and to that end had as many men with oars rowing as there was room for them to row. As the boat was approaching the falls the noise of the falls was something appalling and father ordered me to go below, fearing that I might be knocked overboard. I stationed myself in the middle of the boat where two men were rowing and anxiously awaited the result. And in passing along down so near did the boat run to a large rock that I could easily have jumped from the boat to the rock. Yet we came through all right and without any injury whatever. There was no perpendicular fall of water in the chute that the boat took, yet in many places the water fell as much as ten or twelve feet, and the falls at that time made a loud, roaring noise, and the river at that place appeared very wide. We proceeded from there down the river to Cairo, at the mouth of the Ohio, without any further trouble. Cairo at that time, the fall of 1817, was a poor place, and what few buildings there were appeared to be built on stilts, or wooden posts some fifteen to twenty feet high, so as to keep dry from the high water. There we met the Mississippi and experienced a great deal of trouble in ascending that river. When the wind was fair we could use the sail and do quite well, but the crookedness of the river and the uncertainty of the wind rendered the sails of but very little service and we had to depend on poling or cordeling the boat along, which was slow and hard work. The cold weather coming on, our boat was frozen up solid and fast opposite the town of Kaskaskia, and there the boat lay until spring. My father and Barker and many others left the boat and went up where they intended to enter their land. Deacon Samuel Smith and father were well acquainted in Maine, and his two sons, Benjamin and James Smith, must have been on our boat and have come up with us, and I did not know it, for the two boys, acting for their father, and my father that winter entered 320 acres of land together. Father was to take the prairie, 160 acres, and the Smith boys were to take the timber, 160 acres, and then they were to divide the land East and West and each would have one half of the timber and one half of the prairie. During the summer of 1818 the Smith boys got out the timber for the house that they built for their father; and in the summer of 1818 my father framed the house for them, I working with him when he did the work. The Smith boys went on and finished the house and the old Deacon Smith lived and died in that house. The old Deacon Smith with his family came to Illinois in the spring of 1819. Timothy Higgins, the father of Robert Higgins, came to Illinois in the fall of 1818, arriving shortly after the death of father and mother. There was another Smith by the name of John Smith, brother of Samuel Smith, who came with his brother Samuel in the spring of 1819. This John Smith was the father of Nathaniel, Benjamin and Valentine Smith. There were also several other children in the family. He settled west of where the father of Robert Higgins settled, but died not many years after coming to the state, and left a widow, who survived him many years. Robert Higgins' mother was Samuel Smith's sister. There were other families who came from Maine, the Temples.—Richard and John. They also settled in that section of the country, and it was known as the Yankee settlement. They were honest, hard-working men, and men well calculated to improve the country. All of the old set have died and but few left of the second generation.

"While our boat was frozen up opposite Kaskaskia, the men portion of the boat left and came up and built houses suitable to live in during the summer, and until better ones could be built. Wm. Fowler and John Dumlapp also came, and Fowler entered land adjoining father's on the North, and his summer house and father's were not over two hundred yards apart. Father and Barker worked from the time they left the boat at Kaskaskia until the boat was ready to move up to St. Louis, father having employed Barker to work for him to improve his place. As near as I can recollect the boat with all on board arrived in St. Louis about the 12th of March, 1818. We stayed in St. Louis but a few days, and Daniel Moore, a brother of Smith Moore, moved us from St. Louis to our home on Richland Creek. The exact time that we arrived there was between the 15th and 18th of March, 1818. Father, with the help of Barker, immediately went to work making rails and fencing land to put in corn, and father planted that spring about fourteen acres of corn, some eight or ten acres of which yielded at least forty bushels per acre, good sound corn. The year of 1818 was a rather wet year, and father worked very hard in hopes of having a comfortable house for the winter. He repaired the old water-mill owned by James Davidson on the Prairie Du Long Creek, an unhealthy locality for a person not acclimated to the country, and after it was repaired, sawed lumber for his house. He had his house framed and ready to raise, and well dug, before he and mother took sick. As near as I can recollect, father and mother were taken sick about the last week of August in 1818, both being taken down at the same time. Aunt Esther, Uncle Barker's wife, was taken sick at about the same time, they living some two miles from where father lived. My mother died on the 15th day of September, 1818, and father died on the 17th day of the same month, and Aunt Barker died on the 27th of September. All three were buried within twenty-five yards of where father and mother died. I was the only person in the house excepting father when mother died, and was sitting on the foot of the bed when she breathed her last. She had been unconscious and knew but little for several days before her death. The balance of the children had gone to Mr. Fowler's for their breakfast. Father at that time was so sick that we did not know that he could speak, yet when Mr. Fowler, who accompanied the children home from his house, reached father and shook him and exclaimed to him, "Mr. Thompson, your wife is dead," father raised up and exclaimed, "My poor children, Mr. Fowler, make her a decent coffin," and but very few words he ever spoke to any one after that. He lived only two days longer. The family of five children, the oldest thirteen and the youngest four, surely felt lonesome. There were neighbors and good ones. Mehitable could readily have found a home if she would not take the young child with her, but she would not give him up and consequently she could not get a home. She stayed a few months with Thos. Talbot, but they refused to keep her and the child both. One of our nearest neighbors, Abner Carr, who married a sister of Samuel Phillips, agreed to keep the child through the winter, if Mehitable would go and live with Mrs. Henry Stout, who was a sister of Mrs. Carr and had no children. So Mehitable found a good home and remained there until she was married. Mrs. Stout proved a true mother and Mehitable found a good home. Nellie (Eleanor) immediately found a good home with Mrs. George Wilderman and lived there until she married. Haines found a good home with Capt. John Stuntz and was bound to him to learn the tanning business. He lived with him until he was twenty-one years old. As for myself, I went to our nearest neighbor's, Wm. Fowler, and asked if I could stay at his house. He and John Dunlap were hewing and scoring logs to build a house to live in. They, up to that time, like my father, had only lived in a summer house. Says Fowler to me in answer to my question, "What can you do to pay for keeping you? Can you score and hew?" I told him that I had never tried to hew any, but I could use an axe quite well for a boy. He handed me an axe and told me to get on a log and let him see what I could do. He was so well pleased with my work that he let me stay and I lived about one year with Fowler. I had been with Fowler only about one month when I was taken very sick, and was sick most of the winter of 1818. In the spring of 1819 Mr. Fowler contracted to build a large house for Samuel Mitchell on Silver Creek, where Mitchell at that time had a saw-mill. I had regained my health and Fowler had me to act as cook for his men while working at the mill. I had from three to seven or eight hands to cook for, but usually about three, and got along quite well, but was so much in the water that at about the time the mill house was finished we all took sick with the fever and ague. In fact every one of us was down with the ague,—Fowler, Dunlap, Mrs. Fowler and their only child and myself. That was about the first of September, 1819. A Mrs. Hill, mother of David Hill, living not far away, came to Fowler and persuaded him to let me go and stay at her house as she said she could soon cure me. I think it was Sunday that I went with her to her house and stayed with her for one week, having the chills every day. She did all that she could for me and the next Sunday after I got there she had her son, Jonathan Hill, take me behind him on his horse and carry me to Capt. John Stuntz's, where brother Haines had been since father's death. I arrived at Stuntz's about the 15th or 20th of September, 1819, and lived with them until the 26th of April, 1828, when my apprenticeship with him expired, I having been bound as was my brother to learn the tanning trade. At the home of Mr. Stuntz and his noble wife I must truthfully say the kindest treatment and best examples were set before my brother and myself, and sorry was I when the 28th of April, 1828, arrived when I bade the family adieu. Abel, if my memory serves me rightly, was taken from Mr. Carr's and Samuel Smith kept him until Mr. Henry Null took him the spring or fall of 1820, and he and his wife treated him as a father and mother would have done."

- (5) The third child of Amos Thompson and Hannah Wooster, Eunice Thompson, b. Bowdoin, Me., Jan. 10, 1780 (one gives the date 1778); d. March 26, 1842 (60y.); m., 1797, Abizer Purington, b. Sept. 10, 1779; d. June 8, 1858 (78y.); son of Rev. Humphrey Purington<sup>6</sup> and Thankful Snow<sup>5</sup>; Humphrey Purington<sup>6</sup> and Thankful Woodbury; Humphrey Purington<sup>6</sup> and Thankful Harding; Hezekiah Purington<sup>3</sup> and Mary ———; Lieut. James Purington<sup>2</sup> and Mary Seammon; of Ancestor George Purington<sup>1</sup>.

One of the descendants has well said: "Grandmother Eunice (Thompson) Purington was very faithful to her thirteen children. She required them to keep the Sabbath according to the Puritan rules, allowing no play and only necessary work to be done. All were expected to attend church services, which were then held in houses and barns. Some must, however, stay at home each Sabbath and take care of the cattle and keep away the wild beasts, which were then so abundant. When two of the sons, Abel and Elisha, were about ten and twelve years of age, they persuaded their father to let them stay at home with their mother, to do the chores on the Sabbath; but it proved that they had most in mind the small brook near what was known as the boiling spring. There they soon cautiously went to play, making water wheels, etc. To correct this matter, the mother told them that if they persisted in such sport the old Scratcher would come after them; but they continued to transgress. One Sabbath morning, while they were busily playing by the brook, the mother dressed herself up as she imagined the Devil or Old Scratcher, as he was commonly called, looked. She went around through the woods and came up to a fence near the boys and began to lustily scratch upon it. The lads were greatly frightened and ran to the barn as fast as they could. The mother took another path to the house, and got there before the boys, and had the Old Scratcher's clothes tucked away out of sight before the boys came to the log house. They were so frightened and ashamed of their wickedness that they never mentioned the circumstance to any member of the family. It was long afterwards that they knew that the creature that they saw at the fence was their mother. It is needless to say that for a time the two boys sturdily kept the Sabbath.

"A year before his marriage to Eunice Thompson, Abizer Purington went into the wilderness, three miles beyond the other settlers in Bowdoin, Me., keeping his way by spotted trees, and clearing up land and building the log house of one room to which he brought his happy bride. He was a shoemaker and a man of good education. He was industrious to the last, and faithful in all his duties. For many years he was a sturdy, faithful deacon in the Free Baptist Church, of which he and his wife were members. His home was truly one lighted by purest faith and Christian love."

- (5) The fourth child of Amos Thompson and Hannah Wooster, Phineas Thompson, b. Bowdoin, Me., Sept. 17, 1782; d. Nov. 22, 1860 (80y.); buried with his wife, near the Gowell farm, Bowdoin, Me.; he spent most of his life in Bowdoin; after his marriage he lived in Lisbon, Me., for awhile, this being the home town of his wife; in 1885 he went to live at Brunswick, Me., with his son, John; he was a faithful farmer and highly respected man; he was a Universalist.

Amos Thompson of Belleville, Ill., writes: "I visited Phineas Thompson in 1829, and found him a stout, hardy man, in the prime of life. I used to go out to the woods with him, across the interval to his timber, to get firewood. He said that he should soon have to build a new house. He was then living with my grandfather in the brick house. He had taken the farm and was to maintain grandfather and grandmother the rest of their lives. That winter I was several days at his place, and Uncle Abijah Thompson's, as they lived near each other. He was then living with his third wife, and the girls of his second marriage were living with him; the daughter Elizabeth married a Hinkley shortly after that. When my father, Abel Thompson, left Maine in December, 1816, Phineas Thompson was living about two miles from my father's place. I think it was called West Bowdoin. I have often been at that place, and his children would come over to our place. In my father's barn I have often played with Wooster and Ray Thompson.

"In Aug., 1884, I visited Phineas Thompson's old place. The lay of the land looked quite natural to me, but the old brick house and the orchard were gone. The new house which Phineas Thompson built on the hill was still there. I was saddened to think of the changes in fifty-five years."

Brown at Fairfield, Me.; admitted to the bar of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine at Norridgewock, Me., Sept. 19, 1871, and to the bar of the Circuit Court of the United States from the First Circuit of Portland, Me., Sept. 23, 1882; bar of Supreme Court of United States at Washington, D. C., Feb. 15, 1880; represented Brunswick, Me., in the Maine Legislature of 1881 and 1883; was one of the commissioners appointed by the Maine Legislature of 1883 to revise and publish the public laws of Maine. Bowdoin College gave him an honorary degree of A. M. in 1880. He moved to Brunswick, Me., in Nov., 1871, and has ever since been one of the most worthy and helpful of its citizens. He had been attorney for the towns of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, and practically for all the large corporations in that vicinity. He organized the Lisbon Falls Fibre Co. and the Pejepscot Paper Co. The Richmond (Me.) National Bank and the First National Bank of Brunswick, Me.; the Lewiston, Bath & Brunswick St. Railway Co., and the Portland & Brunswick St. Railway Co. were among his clients. The list of law students who read law with him is a remarkably fine one. In all his extensive law practice, and in dealing with a great many clients, it was always a source of satisfaction to him to be of service and to do the wise and useful thing. He never advised litigation where he could make a satisfactory settlement for his client. Mr. Thompson's work was that of a strong man. He was far-sighted in business and very competent in the organization of large enterprises. His work in connection with the organization of the Brunswick & Topsham (Me.) Water District and the purchase of the plant of the Maine Water Co. was very thorough and comprehensive. Too much could not be written of this quiet, talented man of such sturdy and sterling qualities.

CHAPTER V.

BENJAMIN THOMPSON OF NEW MEADOWS, BRUNSWICK, ME., AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

His line: (1) William Thompson of Dover, N. H.; (2) James Thompson of Kittery, Me.

(3) Benjamin Thompson, b. Kittery, Me., Sept. 9, 1717. Of the date of his death Ezekiel Thompson, his nephew, says in his Day Book: "He died 50 years before 1831." One says: "Benjamin Thompson of Georgetown, Me., purchased of Rebecca Moseley of Dorchester, Mass., the daughter of Thomas Stevens, seventy-two and one-half acres of land, stretching across the peninsular from, on the one side, the waters of Stevens' or New Meadows River, and on the other side bounded by the waters of Merrymeeting Bay, the latter being where the waters of the Androscoggin River meet, kiss, and mingle with the waters of the Atlantic, the same as the young and gallant tars did with the blooming maidens on the return voyage from the high seas, and thus the place was called Merrymeeting Bay." This was lot No. 50. "Benjamin Thompson lived at Brunswick and Bath, Me.," "near head of New Meadows River, where Thomas and Adam Lemont now live." Constable at Topsham, Me., Nov. 17, 1796, to Nov., 1798. Ezekiel Thompson, m., Oct. 17, 1744, Abigail Philbrook of Bath, Me., b. April 9, 1725; baptized at Bath, 1725. She was in the fifth generation of the Philbrook line. Her father, Jonathan Philbrook, was a prominent shipmaster. Mr. Edwin Stockin of Watertown, Mass., gives her Philbrook line: (1) Thomas Philbrook of Watertown, Mass., who m. Elizabeth ——; (2) Thomas Philbrook, b. 1624; d. Nov. 24, 1700; m., July 22, 1669, Hannah (White) French, daughter of Edward French of Salisbury, Mass., who d. 1624; (3) William Philbrook, b. April 27, 1670; m., Oct. 10, 1869, Mercy Neal, daughter of Walter Neal of Greenland, N. H.; (4) Jonathan Philbrook, b. 1694, of Greenland, N. H.; m. Elizabeth, some give the wife's name as Mann, or Marr; others say Springer.

Ezekiel Thompson in his Day Book, thus speaks of the family of Benjamin Thompson: "Jan. 24, 1831, I hear that Widow Sarah Bates died lately. She was the oldest daughter of my Uncle Benjamin Thompson. Her mother was Abigail Philbrook. After his decease she married old Mr. Tobias Ham, who is since dead (died Oct. 30, 1791) and was called 'Long Tom.' My Uncle Benjamin died about 50 years since. Benjamin Thompson had three sons—Jonathan, David and Alexander. The daughters were Sarah Bates, above mentioned, Abigail, who married Eben Coombs and 2nd Samuel Tebbetts, Esq., and moved to Ohio; Huldah married James Crawford and moved to Pa. Priscilla married Hugh Mulloy, and moved to Ohio; she was the mother of Ebenezer Herrick's wife. Hannah married a Herrick and lived in Greene. One, whose name I have forgotten, married a Blossom and lived in Monmouth, Me. All these were worthy women and bore a good name."

Two lists of the children of Benjamin Thompson and Abigail Philbrook were furnished. One was from Miss Sarah A. Thompson of Topsham, Me., and the other from E. A. Parker, Esq., of Indianapolis, Ind., who secured them from the town clerk of North Georgetown, Me. Both lists harmonize perfectly.

(4) Alexander Thompson, b. Georgetown, Me., May 7, 1758; recorded July 7, 1758; d. at Amelia, O., Oct., 1830. About 1815 he moved to Amelia, O., arriving there in the fall; he always made his home in that town, and is buried in the family cemetery near there.

"He made his way in a rough cart over the mountain roads to Pittsburg, Pa. He and his family went down the Ohio River on a raft of logs which they made. In 1827, when he was nearly 70 years old, he built a church. It was dedicated to God alone; to the free worship of every people who there wished to learn of God. It did not belong to any denomination; it was not built for any sect; it was not erected to further his opinions, or any man's opinions about God and religion. No intermediary of saint or book, or tradition, was to come between the devout soul and the God of its worship. It was not even called a church of the Christian religion, but free for every people to worship God in. Climbing upon the frame of this new meeting house as it neared completion, Alexander Thompson dedicated it with these words: 'Here stands a fine frame, and it should have a good name. It shall be called Republican—free for all denominations to worship God in.' And nearly every denomination in that part of Ohio at some time worshipped in the Republican Meeting House, including Jews and Mormons. Among the denominations which used the church with some regularity in those early days were Christians, Universalists, Protestant Methodists and Presbyterians. In it was held a memorable debate, said to have been of several weeks' duration, between Hon David Fisher, a neighbor of Mr. Thompson, and a Universalist missionary."

M. (first), about 1778, Hannah Baker, b. Falmouth, Me., Feb. 3, 1754; d. about May, 1821; daughter of Capt. Elisha Baker and Sarah Wilson of Monmouth, Me. ## CHAPTER VI.

PRISCILLA THOMPSON AND LIEUT. HUGH MULLOY AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.

Priscilla Thompson's line: (1) William Thompson of Dover, N. H.; (2) James Thompson of Kittery, Me.; (3) Benjamin Thompson of New Meadows, Brunswick, Me.

(4) Priscilla Thompson, b. Georgetown, Me., May 13, 1754; d. New Richmond, O., April 4, 1819. "She was a woman of that force of character which was necessary in those early, trying times. Yet she was possessed of a gentle spirit. She was a noble, self-reliant woman who has sent the grand influence of her life down the long line of her descendants. She was a true type of many Thompson daughters in many neighborhoods and states."

M., June 25, 1776, Hugh Mulloy, b. Albany, N. Y., Dec. 4, 1751; d. New Richmond, O., July 11, 1845 (94th y.). This family moved to Ohio in 1817.

The epitaph from the tombstone of Hugh Mulloy: "In memory of Hugh Mulloy, a Lt. in the Revolutionary War; b. Albany, N. Y.; married one of great worth; joined the army at Cambridge, 1775. He was personally acquainted with Washington and Lafayette; was in the retreat from Ticonderoga; in both battles at Saratoga; lay at Valley Forge; was at Monmouth; and was thrice wounded—once at Hubbardstown in 1780. Among the bravest he was brave. He came to Ohio in 1817 and died July 11, 1845 in the 94th year of his age."

He and his wife were buried in the cemetery at Boat Run, O., but as the river was washing away the ground there, Mr. J. G. Mulloy, now of Fremont, Neb., and others, removed the remains to the old cemetery between Mt. Hygiene and New Richmond, O.

O. B. Clason, Esq., of Gardiner, Me.: "Hugh Mulloy was one of the pioneers of Litchfield, Me. His ancestors came from the north of Ireland and were of Scotch-Irish extraction. When a boy he emigrated to the then province of Maine and lived in Brunswick and Georgetown. While home on a furlough from the Continental Army he married Priscilla Thompson. When the news of the battle of Bunker Hill was received he, with other patriots from his locality, started for Boston. He at once enlisted in the army at Cambridge as a private. In April following he was promoted to Corporal; promoted in the June following to Sergeant, and was commissioned Nov. 6, 1776, as ensign in the Co. of which George White was Captain. His commission was issued at Boston, by order of Congress, and signed by John Hancock, President. In May, 1778, he was promoted again to the rank of First Lieutenant. He was in the battle of Ticonderoga, in May, 1777; was in the battle of Hubbardstown; in both battles of Saratoga (Stillwater); and witnessed the surrender of Burgoyne, Oct. 17, 1777. He was in several skirmishes, in one of which he was wounded. At the battle of Monmouth he was twice wounded severely, and one of these wounds subsequently proved so troublesome as to incapacitate him from active duty, and he was honorably discharged from the service. This discharge was written on the back of his commission in the handwriting of Gen. Washington. This paper, which was on file in the pension department at Washington, was destroyed in 1814 by the British when they sacked the town.

"Lt. Mulloy had a personal acquaintance with Washington and Lafayette. He was initiated into the mysteries of Free Masonry in Washington's tent, and was secretary of the lodge which existed in the army. Immediately after his discharge from the army, he moved with his family to Monmouth, Maine, and was among the first settlers there. He held several positions of trust in the Plantation, among them Plantation Clerk. It was subsequently found that the land he had settled upon belonged to Gen. Dearborn; and the Gen. bought out his improvements, giving him a note of the following tenor:

"'Wales, Me., June 27, 1783.

"'For value received I promise to pay Hugh Mulloy the sum of fifty Spanish Milled dollars by the 15th day of Oct., 1784, with interest until paid. (Signed) Henry Dearborn.'

"Upon selling out his interest in Monmouth, Me., Hugh Mulloy settled in Litchfield, Me., upon land now owned by Warren R. Baker, by the side of Pleasant Pond, where he made his home for more than thirty years. He was frequently moderator of the town meetings, and also a mem• ber of the school board, and took a lively interest in education. In 1817 Mr. Mulloy moved to near Williamsburg, Clermont Co., Ohio, where he ever after made his home. At the time of his death he was the last commissioned officer of the regular Continental army, and as such his portrait was painted by Frankenstein, the celebrated artist. The Legislature of Ohio made an appropriation for this painting.

"Old Masons say that it is handed down by tradition that the Masons in Gardiner, Me., early in the present century, used to go by boat or canoes, out to Mr. Mulloy's home, by the side of the beautiful Cobbosseecontee Pond, and meet in Masonic brotherhood, and that he frequently met them in Gardiner. They had no lodge there then, or until the last of Hugh Mulloy's living there, but kept up occasional meetings for the work of the order."

Mr. A. E. Parker writes: "Hugh Mulloy, the dear old man, how well I remember him as he came down from Williamsburgh in his little Dearborn wagon, to see my mother. His hair was white and his step was feeble. But he would enthusiastically tell of all the hardships of his service in the Revolutionary days."

Parker Donaldson: "Hugh Mulloy was a stern-spirited, brave man."

(5) Catherine Mulloy, b. Litchfield, Me., Jan. 11, 1786; d. Edina, Mo., when nearly ninety years of age. Hon. Hugh Mulloy Herrick of Patterson, N. J., writes: "She was a woman of strong mentality, and she and hers were well and favorably known in the communities where she lived." Eben A. Parker says, "The last time she came to visit us she was nearly eighty-eight years old, but still wide-awake and active. In 1850, when she was 64 years of age, she taught school with the zeal which had characterized her work along those lines in her younger days." Catherine Mulloy m. (first), Oct., 1807, Samuel Herrick, b. Greene, Me., Dec. 11, 1784; d. July 4, 1822. He d. of yellow fever on a New Orleans steamer bound up the river; this family moved from Maine to Ohio in 1813. M. (second), William O. Bowler; she lived in Indiana for awhile and then settled in Edina, Mo.;

there are said to have been eight children of her marriage with Samuel Herrick.

- (6) Hannah Thompson Herrick; m., Feb. 18, 1836, William E. Davis of Clarksburg, Ind.; she lived at Edina, Mo., for some time. Her mother wrote in 1850, "She has three little boys." The mother states, "At the time of her death she left three sons: George W., Francis Marion and Andrew Jackson."

- (6) Samuel Bowler; a brave soldier in the Civil War.
- (6) Martha E. Bowler; m. Mr. Hobaek. "She left three children when she died." In 1850 she was a second time married.

(A long search was made for the full records of the children and descendants of this noble Catherine Mulloy (Herrick) Bowler; but it was nearly in vain; but her niece, Mrs. Abbie C. Hitch of Catawba, Ky., kindly loaned the letters which were written to her and her mother when Catherine Mulloy Bowler was an aged woman; these letters are herewith printed, as giving glimpses of her family, and as showing forth her sturdy strength and trust in the midst of many sorrows and in the stress of the Civil War, in which so many of her loved ones were taking part.)

"Edina, Mo. Mch 18, 1850.

"(To Mrs. Martha [Mulloy] Sherwin, Catawba, Ky:)

"Dear and much loved sister. I owe you an apology for my delay in writing—I know not whence this delay. It is always a source of satisfaction to hear from you by your own hand. In the first place I will say that I am in the possession of a reasonable state of health, and also the rest of our family, except Priscilla. She was taken with a bad cold, or influenza, the first of the winter, and her lungs appear to be much disordered, though she is able to be up and oversee her domestic concerns. I feel concerned for her safety.

"I am now teaching a small school eight miles from my home, among our old neighbors. Four weeks are now expired. If I continue through the quarter I think I shall go home and not be persuaded to leave again. Samuel and Raphael are working in partnership. They have rented Mr. Boone's farm this year—his sons being in California. One will follow the prairie breaking, and the other will tend the crop, as they did last year. They have now paid up for their team. If they are blest with health, I hope they will do tolerably well during the ensuing year.

"I hope that when I hear from you again that your son will have returned to the loving arms of his beloved parents and friends with an ample reward for his toil.

"O, sister, how rejoiced we should be to have a visit from you when he returns. If fortune favors, do try to come. It is not so much to travel, as to contemplate the journey beforehand.

"It is now some time since I commenced this letter. Priscilla is much better than she was. The rest of the family are all well. I have had my health better this winter than I have had for a long time. I have been able to attend to my school every day since I commenced. We have had a very pleasant winter, with very little snow. If it continues as it is now people will be plowing the coming week.

"I know that you will write to me as soon as you receive this. Let me know how you all do. I believe that I wrote to you since I received a letter from Mr. Hoback. If I have, I wrote the particulars. I will state that he is married, and I have not heard from him since. His wife is of a respectable family, but I am not personally acquainted with her. He wrote that the children were all doing well. I think that I shall soon write to him. He stated that he was in better circumstances than he had ever been. He plans to move to the north part of the State the coming fall, where his mother and brothers are gone.

"Wm. L. Davis and family are all well and send their best respects to you and yours. The three little boys are doing well. They have been at school all winter. They are writing very well. They are reading in the Fourth Reader and the U. S. History, and have commenced in arithmetic.

"Priscilla's daughter is now grown. Though small, she is a fine promising girl and a great comfort to her mother, though she is not very healthy.

"I regret not seeing your family when I was in Ohio. And when you write give me the particulars from James and likewise from all the rest. I hear that the men who were in California have gone to Oregon the past winter. I have delayed writing so long that it seems as if I cannot write at all as I wish to, nor half what I could say if I could see you.

"Raphael and Samuel will commence the prairie breaking tomorrow. The health of the country is good, except some cases of whooping cough, and that is more favorable than common.

"Please accept and excuse my poor letter, for on reviewing it I perceive that it is altogether disjointed, and my mind is in accordance with it. Remember me to all our dear relatives and accept my warmest love and best wishes for you and yours.

"C. Bowler.

"P. S. I have never heard from Nancy J. Parker, except what brother wrote. If you have heard anything since then please inform me."

To her niece, Mrs. Abigail C. Hitch:

"Edina, Mo., May 19, 1862.

"My Dear Friends and Relatives in Ky.:

"I received your letter on March 5th and am glad to hear that you are all well and are measureably secluded from the troubles that we have in this State. Since I wrote to you before another of my grandsons is gone to try the realities of another world. He was accidentally shot at Pittsburgh Landing but a short time before the battle. Samuel W. Joliffe, his father and older brother, were with him. Perhaps he was taken from the evil to come. He was a promising youth, dearly beloved by all his family and by all his acquaintances. I feel the blow repeated. But my trust is in God that ere long I shall meet them all again where troubles never come.

"I received a letter from my son last Saturday. He was well and was still at Hanibal. I don't know how long he will remain there, or when he will be home. I have not seen him since Feb. I am now home again on your own little place in the country with Mr. Foss and Martha Jane. They are still planting here. The weather has been very dry for a long time. May 20. No rain yet.

"Catherine and the children were here yesterday, and all well. She brought a letter she had just received from her father. He and William were in the battle. They lost everything they had and have never drawn a cent of pay since they have been there. They have not a cent to buy anything with. He wrote to her to send some paper and stamps. Their letters have been written with a pencil on the leaf of an old book. The letters are sent by the Adjutant to Cairo. They are mailed there, a soldier's letter, and we pay at Edina post office. Many others come that way. They are in the vicinity of Corinth, Tenn., and every day expecting a battle.

"I have not heard from my grandson Herrick Hoback since he was wounded in the battle. I am looking every day for a letter from his sister, in hope to get news. There are now upwards of 200 militia stationed in Edina. We have no courts here since the War commenced. The soldiers are quartered in the Court House. It is fortified, and a large flag floats from the cupola. The jail is used for the prisoners and is never empty. There are scouts constantly scouring the country and bringing in more or less prisoners. How long this bloody strife will last God only knows. It has been viewed in the distance for nearly fifty years, but I have always hoped that I should never live to see the time when it would occur. Nor do I grieve for my three daughters who died before their sons fell in this dreadful war. If it is my son's lot to end his life there I feel as if I could not long survive him.

"My granddaughters all wish to be kindly remembered to you and all. Tell Susanna that this is for her as well as for you. If she will write to me and her husband we will respond. Tell her that I cannot write to her individually, for I do not know her name. Give my kind respects to your father, sister and family, and accept the same for yourself and husband. Please both write soon. Writing, reading, and receiving letters, helps to buoy me up.

"I remain your Affectionate Aunt,
"C. M. H. Bowler."

To her niece, Mrs. Abby C. Hitch:

"Flora, Ills., Sept. 30, 1864.

"Dear Niece:

"I received a letter from my granddaughter, Catherine E. Munns, informing me that you had written to her and that she intended answering it the coming day. So I am in hopes that you have heard from her before this time. And now that our correspondence is renewed I hope it will be continued. I hardly know why it was broken off so long. I was exceedingly glad to hear from you again. But she stated no particulars. When you receive this you will respond and let me know about the welfare of yourself and family. I am in the usual health, though old and infirm. I have no right to complain. I am as comfortable as can be expected at my age. I feel thankful that I am able to read and write, so as to correspond with my friends.

"My son, my only living child, has been in the army ever since the commencement of the War. Last Feb. he reënlisted for three years more. He has lately been home on a furlough. When he returned I came with him to St. Louis where he put me on the cars that I might come to some of our friends in Ills. I plan to stay there until he returns, if it please God that he does return.

"Your cousin Hannah Davis left three sons, George W., Francis M., and Andrew J. They are all in the War from the first. George died in the hospital at Quincy, Ills. Marion was wounded by the bursting of a musket in the hands of another soldier. After extreme suffering for a long time he recovered, but is nearly ruined for life. Andrew is in the Iowa Cavalry, Company M., at McDougall's Bluff, Arkansas. They are in Steele's Division of the Cavalry that my son is in. His address is the 3d Mo. Cavalry, Co. E., Little Rock, Arkansas. These two forts are 60 miles apart.

"I hope before this time you have got Catherine Munn's letter which will inform you all about her mother's family and her own. Your cousin Catherine Parker left one child, Nancy J. Both parents died when she was young. She was left to the care of her Uncle Wm. Parker after her grandpartues died, where she lived until she was married. Her address is Mrs. Nancy J. McCall, New Hope, Ohio. Please write to her and form an acquaintance with her, for which I know that she would be very grateful. I believe that she has two half brothers in the army, but she is a lone one on her mother's side.

"Martha E. Hoback left three children: Herrick, Catherine D. and Nancy Priscilla. Herrick was killed at Pittsburgh Landing, as you have been informed. Kate was married to Frederic Martin, who is also in the Army. They live in Cassville, Howard Co., Iowa. Nancy is not married. Her father (Mr. Hoback) was a Methodist preacher for several years previous to the War. But his patriotism for his country was so great that he went out Capt. of a Co. in 1861. But his health did not permit him to continue. He resigned after getting his health mended up a little. He commenced preaching again. He writes to me that the state of his health demands him to locate and he thinks of coming to the West to settle.

"Now, dear Abby, please write to me a good long letter. Tell me of all your friends, your dear old father, your sister Susan, your friends in California, and about your husband and children in particular. Give me your sister's address, for you and she were made up in the bundle with the other dear ones that I wish to hear from. Adieu.

"Yours Truly, Catherine Bowler,"

* * * * *

To her niece, Mrs. Abby C. Hitch:

"Edina, Mo., Apr. 8, 1870.

"My Dear Niece:

"I take up the pen once more to inform you that I am still living and that I am in as good health as is commonly allotted to old age. I am feeble. My sight and hearing both fail. But still I can walk about the house, and truly thank God that I am no worse. I am subject to spells of sickness. But now is my time of best health. In looking over some old letters that I had preserved, I found your photograph. It brought past recollections, both of you and of your beloved mother, so to my mind that I resolved to write to you. But I can see these lines but very faintly, and perhaps you will not understand what I am trying to write.

"Two years before the War ended I was in Ills. with my step-grandchildren. Samuel came to me there. Then we staid two years longer and came back to Mo. two years ago last month. We came to David Munn's. You know she is your cousin, Catherine Joliffe, that was. This has been my home ever since.

"I am comfortably provided for, but live very retired. They take me twice a year to see Martha. They live ten miles from here. She is Catherine's married sister, and her youngest sister is now eighteen years of age. Jane had two sons and two daughters. Catherine has four children living, two daughters and two sons. She lost two children. Her sister Matilda lives with her and her youngest brother, Thomas Benton, is now 15 years old.

"I have not heard from your Aunt Parker for a long time. But I am looking for a letter from her. Dear Abby, please write to me. I long to hear from you all. Your respected old mother, sisters and brothers. I think Dr. Carr came back from California and settled in Iowa. I am glad to hear that Nancy has come back to the States. I always thought I should be unhappy out where she has been. Tell me all about Susanna and her family. Give my love to her and give me her address.

"Tell about your brothers. Do not fail to write, for I am old and lonely. It comforts me to hear from my dear distant friends. Catherine and Matilda join with me in love to all. Farewell.

"Your Aunt, C. H. Bowler."

To her niece, Mrs. Abby C. Hitch:

"Edina, Mo., Apr. 14, 1871.

"Dear Niece Abby Hitch:

"I have been in poor health for a month past though not confined to my bed. But my great age forbids my being long on this earth. My earnest prayer is to be ready when God calls for me. I was 84 last January. The family is as well as usual. Martha Jane was here last Saturday and she and her family are well.

"Your cousin, Andy Davis, who lives at Gosport, Ind., lost his wife last Christmas. He thinks of coming back to this place in the summer. His brother is in Kansas. They are all that is left of your cousin Hanuah's family.

"Mch 12 I got a letter from your Aunt Parker. Her health is reasonable for one of her age. She keeps house, with hired help. She is able to drive out in her little carriage, or walk to the Academy. She said she had her garden ploughed to plant peas and early potatoes. I have no doubt that she will be working in her garden all the spring. Her letters are very satisfactory. Catherine has four children. Her oldest, Ella is in her 14th year. Robert the youngest is 20 months old.

"Martha has four children. Samuel is here with me. His health is not very good. He has been afflicted with neuralgia for several years. He suffers much at times, but is not often laid by altogether, and works very hard. He sends his love to you all, especially to William, if he is with you. You said you expected him but of his return we have never heard. Your Aunt wrote that Nancy was still in Iowa. Your cousin, Nancy Jane McCall, that lives at New Hope,

Ohio, is of my daughter Catherine Parker. She wrote to me a year ago that she was in bad health, and did not expect to be better. Tell Martha to write to Matilda Joliffe. She still lives with Catherine. Sarah lives with Martha J. Fox

"My granddaughters are busy planting the garden.

"Your loving Aunt, Catherine Bowler."

(5) Priscilla Mulloy, b. Litchfield, Me., Saturday, May 18, 1793; d. Mount Hygiene, Clermont County, O., Sept. 4, 1874. Of her Mr. Parker Donaldson of Cincinnati, O., gives the following sketch:

"Priscilla Mulloy early manifested superior powers of mind and an unusually resolute, ambitious spirit. We learn from some friends of her youth that she was remarkably handsome and attractive. Mrs. Abigail Conklin says she well remembers being told by her mother, in her childhood, to get her work done and prepare to meet her handsome cousin Priscilla. And when she arrived she remembers looking upon her as a stately, beautiful woman. A much more important fact is, that, while she was quite young, she made a decision to embrace the religion of Jesus. She frequently and affectionately spoke of her first pastor, Elder Stinson, and of his wife. This wife was a remarkable woman for those times. So earnest was she in coöperating in the good work of her husband in urging sinners to repent, that the deacons of the church felt called upon to admonish her that she was transcending the bounds of propriety for a woman by praying and speaking in public. Possessing a spirit meek as well as earnest, she resolved to heed the admonition of the brethren. But when she came again into the meetings she was so filled with the love and spirit of the Master that she could not forbear to speak. This seemingly incoherent item is mentioned because of its effect on the mind of the young Priscilla in that susceptible age. The effect was so great as to become in a measure a life-long inspiration to her, and for years she has been known to obey religious impulses in a similar manner. She said that no sermon ever seemed to move the people as did the words and example of the godly Mrs. Stinson.

"In her early girlhood Priscilla Mulloy was also deeply impressed by an interesting scene which she witnessed. It was the baptism of a little friend, Benjamin Ring. He was so young and small that Elder Stinson took him in his arms, carried him down into the water and baptized him, and bore him to the shore again in his extended arms. Always when she related this incident she would stand with her arms extended in imitation of the elder. No doubt that scene made an impression upon her that was never obliterated. At the age of eighteen Priscilla was baptized and united with the church. The resolution thus to obey her Savior was made at a meeting held by Elder Stinson at a new barn in the neighborhood. Among the obstacles, hindrances and crosses, which usually beset one's pathway in taking such a step, one usually looms up above all others. Her particular cross was the supposed opposition of her father. Although of an age when she could act for herself, yet her sense of obligation to her parents induced her to go to them and make her wishes known. What was her joyful surprise to find entire willingness on their part. Her father said that he never planned to control his children in matters of religion. Thus she began her Christian career.

"Mother Parker, as she was always called in Ohio, did not at any time turn away from or neglect religious duties. But, like many others, for a few years, she seemed to have fallen asleep in reference to them. Not having brought a church letter with her from the East, she did not, for many years, assume any church connection. But in the time of great revival from 1836 to 1840, she was among the number who were awakened to duty, and she united with the Free Baptists at what is now called the Lindale, O., church. From that time, for many years, she was remarkably active and zealous in her religious duties. No ordinary circumstances, not even boisterous winds, nor pelting rains would keep her from the meetings of the church. And yet she was often heard—more of late years—to deplore her delinquencies and lack of faith. She sometimes said, 'I am a natural infidel.' Few, if any, were more faithful to convictions of truth and duty, or stood forth with more moral courage to advocate the great principles of practical Christianity, even though they were unpopular and persecuted. She was impatient of opposition and delay. She was early in the anti-slavery cause and continued a zealous advocate and worker so long as the institution of slavery lasted. She once made a pilgrimage into Kentucky, calling on her old friends and exhorting them concerning their sin. She was no less interested in the temperance cause. Not only did she participate in the Temperance Crusade in a quiet way, but she, in company of Dr. Rogers and Mrs. Mary Applegate, made a similar crusade. They entered every grocery, dramshop and tavern, in New Richmond, O., where drinks were sold, and exhorted the proprietors to desist from their traffic. They, being American gentlemen, heard the appeal, and in course of time, though not immediately, abandoned the business. Succeeding this, there was a time when New Richmond, O., was reported to be the most orderly town and to possess the most temperate, intelligent inhabitants of any in that country. When David Gibson came to reestablish and extend the whiskey business it was a sorrowful day for lovers of Temperance and Sobriety, and to none was it more so than to Mother Priscilla Mulloy Parker and her good husband. Both of them personally remonstrated with Mr. Gibson, only to be repulsed by him with derision. Mother Parker addressed letters to him on the subject as long as he would take them from the post office and read them. But these pungent truths he could not bear, and he finally told her he would never read another letter of hers.

"Mother Parker was in the habit of examining every new subject which was brought before the public notice, heartily endorsing whatever in her judgment seemed to contain truth. Among them was Spiritualism. This, for a time, drew her away from the ordinary forms of religious service and proved a manifest injury to her spiritual state. But in the course of time, the Banner of Light, and such literature, was discontinued. The Journal and Messenger, and other religious papers, and the old Family Bible, were substituted. Her old devotional spirits and habits returned. Again she frequented the House of God and participated earnestly in the prayer and social meetings. Often, in the last years of her life, she exhorted the young people to espouse the religion of Christ. Gospel preaching again had its wonted influence over her. As constantly as she was able to do so, she attended the ministrations of Elder Drinkwater and enjoyed them much, being greatly encouraged and benefitted by them. She often said that his Thanksgiving sermons were a comfort to her. In her last sickness she often asked for Scripture reading, singing, or prayer, at her bedside, and sometimes she designated the portion of Scripture which she would like to hear. The songs which she chose were chiefly those used in the Temperance Crusade.

"In whatever good she engaged she came as nearly as anyone to fulfilling the Scriptures, 'She hath done what she could.'

"Her childish friendship with Benjamin Ring, which has already been referred to, ripened in maturer years into the pure esteem and affection which can be experienced but once. She married this life-long lover, and moved to Hallowell, Me., where she spent some of the happiest days of her life. In her own narrative she says, 'In the early part of the autumn of 1810 we were married and I rode home with my young, beautiful husband to Hallowell in a chaise. We did not dream that any one could have a greater share of happiness than had fallen to our lot. The town was beautiful, and the society was delightful to me. Time glided by; all things were dressed in golden hues to my enraptured vision.'

"The husband, Benjamin Ring, was a merchant and took great pleasure in supplying her with all personal household comforts in that cosy, complete, and frugal style which comported with that day in our country's history. But alas, as the poet has said, sadly, and perhaps truly, 'You may suspect some danger nigh when you possess delight.' So in a few months this companionship came to a sad end. In Dec., 1814, Benjamin Ring started for Boston, Mass., to purchase goods for his store. The schooner on which he took passage was capsized in a gale and he, with all the passengers but one, were frozen to death. One says, 'The sorrow which then began in the heart of the widowed wife never ceased, though she bore it all with a wonderful fortitude. I once called on her on a gloomy day, the anniversary of Mr. Ring's death. She said she had lived all her early bereavement over again, as if it had just occurred. But her trust was firmly anchored in her Lord.'

"The only child of her marriage to Mr. Ring was Benjamin<sup>6</sup>, b. 1814, and d. of fever in Ohio in the winter of 1815.

"In 1815, as soon as her affairs could be adjusted after the loss of her husband, she started with her infant son in her arms, in company with some friends who were emigrating to Ohio. They came in wagons to the Ohio River, and thence down the River on flat boats and landed on the Frandon Farm below New Richmond, Ohio. Then she was taken to the neighborhood now known as Lindale, O., where she was kindly received into the home of her cousin, Deacon Andrew Coombs. In that vicinity she taught her first school in the West. There, too, she was laid low by the malignant fever which prevailed at the time in that new country. Her babe was also smitten. While she was still prostrate the dead body of her Bennie, beautiful even in death, was brought to her bedside. On her return to health she went to teach in Kentucky, nearly opposite Point Pleasant, Ohio. She boarded in the family of Esquire James Kennedy, a Scotch gentleman of wealth, culture and intelligence. While there she became acquainted with her second husband, Rev. Daniel Parker, a talented Universalist minister, who was then preaching at Point Pleasant, Ohio, Newport, Ky., where he lived, and at Cincinnati, O. They were married Oct. 24, 1816. He was of the sixth generation of his Parker line, and was b. Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 7, 1781; d. Mount Hygiene, Clermont County, O., March 22, 1861 (79y.). When he was six years old he came with his parents to western Pennsylvania, and lived there several years. The family then moved to southeastern Ohio, seven miles north of Pomeroy.

"During the early years of his ministry he rode on horseback through the wilderness of southern Ohio and northern Kentucky. He established the first Restorationist Church in Cincinnati, O."

A good history of the Parker family will be found in the appendix to this book, and more records of this noble line are being gathered. The pictures of Rev. Daniel Parker and his talented wife, Priscilla Mulloy, which are here given, are from oil paintings in the possession of Mrs. Fannie Currier of Dayton, O.

Of his first meeting with Priscilla (Mulloy) Ring, Rev. Daniel Parker wrote in his autobiography, "I soon became convinced that at last Providence had led me to the person intended for my companion in future life." The mutual friend of these lovers, James Kennedy, Esq., who was a friend of Robert Burns, gave them a cordial invitation to celebrate their wedding at his hospitable home in Kentucky, one mile above Point Pleasant, O. At the same time Mr. Kennedy's daughter, Florence, was to be married to Thomas Girard, son of General Girard, and grandson of Governor Girard of Kentucky. The two handsome couples came out together into the large "best room," as the parlor was then styled, in the midst of a crowd of happy guests. The old Baptist minister, the Rev. John Stevens, was embarrassed, and began to marry Daniel Parker to Florence Kennedy. The promptness with which Daniel Parker corrected this mistake, contributed much to the praise of him among the guests, and not a little to their merriment. Soon the happy pairs were seated at the sumptuous table, as magnificently furnished as a Kentucky host could have done it in those days. Priscilla Parker was sitting as erect as a queen beside her husband when some one whispered, but loud enough for her to hear, "She will not always sit as straight as she does now." She at once, and quietly, resolved that she would sit as then—and maintained her queenly bearing down to her old age.

A short time previous to his marriage Father Parker, as he was always called, was delighted to find that Mr. David Moreton was willing to sell the half of his farm on which he then resided. This became Mount Hygiene, on the Ohio River, near New Richmond, Clermont County. This included the sawmill which the Moretons had built on Boat Run. Daniel Parker at once secured this property, in 1818, and it was their happy home through the long years of their married life. There they lived in comfort, though they toiled hard to get the farm paid for and to procure the means of living.

Mother Parker taught several select schools after her marriage. She also taught all that she could in her home, as the country districts could then afford only a few months of school in the winter, and that not of the best quality. Mr. John Cooper, who became a merchant at Point Pleasant, O., and Mr. David Moreton, were, however, fine teachers, whose good influence was long felt in that community.

As their children grew up, Father and Mother Parker felt a deepening interest in the education of these dear ones. Mother Parker was one day in the company of Mr. Catheart, who was teacher of a select school in Cincinnati, O. When she heard him remark that he hoped to educate his son and daughter so that they might be able to conduct an academy, she was inspired to resolve that she would adopt the same plan for her oldest children, James and Susanna. As soon, therefore, as they were old enough, they were sent to New Richmond, O., where they could enjoy advantages superior to those at home. Susanna was in the schools of Miss Sarah Ann Molyneaux, afterwards Mrs. John Rogers and Mrs. John W. Weekly. Besides this, Dr. James T. Johnson, a very intelligent, scholarly and public-spirited man of that town, gave free lectures on English grammar and botany. Mother Parker generally attended these lectures with her children, being an enthusiastic lover of these and of other sciences, and thus inspired in her children a deep love of the same things. Doctor Johnson's lectures were well attended. Among the pupils were Capt. John Comers and wife—then young and single; Mrs. Sarah Walker, who became Mrs. Moreton of Marietta, O.; Miss Lydia Applegate; Dr. Knox Rotchford, who settled in Alexandria, Ky., but who was then a student of medicine with Dr. John Rogers; and numerous others whose scholarly ways and fine characters were of great help to the Parkers and their children. A few years later Rev. James Walker, an eminent divine and author, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church in that place, gave a very able and instructive course of lectures in geology. And all this did much to make the "Golden Age" in New Richmond, O.

Finally Mother Parker conceived the idea of erecting a school building on the farm in which the older children might teach and help educate the younger ones. After much deliberation Father Parker acquiesced in the plan. Lack of means was the great obstacle. With a family of ten members to maintain by the proceeds of a small farm, and spending much of his time away preaching, for a very meagre remuneration in money, such an undertaking was to him almost impossible. Moreover, the principal of the proposed academy was then a youth entirely unqualified for such a position. He must be educated by means which were wholly unseen. The prospect was by no means flattering, and none but an ambitious and determined spirit would have entertained the thought. But Mother Parker possessed such a spirit, while her husband, while slower of decision, and more timid of venture, when he had once made up his mind to try anything, especially if it involved a duty, or a moral principle, was resolute and persevering to execute. Father Parker secretly resolved on trying to save from his scanty income, by small sums, $200, to begin with. He said to himself that if the Lord would enable him to do this he would take it as an indication of His favor, and venture on. In the course of time he succeeded in saving this sum, and it was very interesting to hear him tell how the Lord had blessed him in his efforts, throwing into his hands here a little and there a little, through unexpected channels, in several cases for ministerial services for which, before that, he had seldom received any compensation.

In 1839 the building of the famous Clermont Academy was finally begun and carried on to completion in the spirit of prayer and consecration. In the meantime the teacher was away at school trying to acquire the necessary qualifications for the responsible position. Mother Parker's heart rejoiced when she beheld the darling object of her desire and long expectation in operation. Never for a moment in its history did her interest in its prosperity abate, nor her watchfulness wane. All the examinations, exhibitions, social meetings, reunions, etc., especially the lyceum meetings, have witnessed the fervor of her zeal and the intense delight which she always took in the culture and development of the youthful mind and heart. No entertainment seemed to give her so much pleasure as the literary and religious exercises in which the students were engaged, and in which she always participated when she was able, either by reading from her prose or poetic writings, or selections, or in the way of debate or criticism.

Father Parker, though equally interested in the history at heart in the establishment and prosperity of Clermont Academy, was nevertheless always ready to recognize his wife as the leading spirit in its incipiency. On one occasion, at the close of one of the annual exhibitions, he was making some remarks, reciting some of the history of the school, and relating some of the labors and anxieties connected with its history, and also speaking his gratitude and gratification in the good results already realized. Dr. Nathaniel Culver of Cincinnati was present. When Father Parker had done speaking, the doctor said in substance: "That is just such a history as a woman would instigate. Now tell me, was not your wife the prime mover in this enterprise?" Thereupon Father Parker, with his characteristic candor, replied, "Yes, she was;" so cheerfully giving up to her a large meed of praise.

Mother Parker once wrote thus of the school: "It was in the summer of 1816 that my late husband, Rev. Daniel Parker, came riding down the Franklin Road, passing by what has since become the Browning farm. As he approached the descent of the hill, in full view of the Ohio River, and of the hills beyond, clothed in the rich foliage of an unbroken Kentucky forest—the beautiful expanded area before him combined the grand and the picturesque—he contemplated the extended prospect with delight, while a halo seemed to his impressable imagination to be spread over all. The full moon was rising, clothing all objects with her chastening light. Then, as he slowly descended the hill to Boat Run, his contemplative mind pictured that here was the theatre for good from which should spread illuminations in some, to him, inexplicable way, connected with his destiny. Never having been in the spot before, he gave himself up to those happy hallucinations, and in a joyous state of mind approached the dwelling of his old friend, David Moreton, and his good lady, who lived on the first elevation from the river, now known as Mount Hygiene. He had known the Moretons in Pennsylvania. He soon made arrangements to buy land of the Moretons."

Years after the above was written by Mother Parker, and a few years after her death, an additional incident came from the lips of an eye witness, Mr. James Ferguson. Father Parker, when he came into full view of the lovely hills and valleys, was so deeply impressed by the scene that he halted, alighted from his horse, and knelt in prayer in the quiet, near the roadside. He prayed that in this vicinity, in due time, there might be founded some institution of instruction for the people. This was before he owned any of the land, or knew that he was to own any. He knelt there alone in the woods—yet not alone! The Master was near and heard his prayer, and in process of time answered it by giving the Clermont Academy. He was not alone in another sense, for the farmer boy passing that way saw the worshipper and heard part of the prayer. He was awe-struck by the scene, walked softly, looked and listened as he walked, gazed upon the beautiful, earnest face of the stranger and passed on. When the boy had grown to be a gray-haired man, he attended one of the exhibitions of Clermont Academy and related this touching incident, which was still so vivid in his memory.

Thus was established the Clermont Academy, which for many years continued its blessed work which is so well remembered by the many pupils scattered so widely over the world. On the death of its first principal, James Kennedy Parker, the school was discontinued. The buildings were sold a few years ago to a Presbyterian Society to be used as a Vacation Home for working girls.

(6) James Kennedy Parker, b. Clermontville, O., Sept. 22, 1817; d. June 14, 1894. The mother gave him, and her other children, careful educational training at home. When not six years old he was a pupil of Mr. David Moreton. Under John Cooper, later on, he not only studied the common school branches, but trigonometry and bookkeeping in the log cabin schoolhouses of those times. As soon as he and his sister Susanna were old enough they were sent to New Richmond, O., where they could enjoy superior educational advantages. He was under the fine training of Rev. Charles Swain, Clement Pierce, Rev. Josiah Denham, Rev. Mr. Blakeley and others. In the school of Mr. John W. Wheeler, on the closing day of school, July 4, 1839, James K. Parker made his first public address. He studied in South Hanover Presbyterian College, near Madison, Ind., entering May, 1835; entered Pleasant Hill Academy, near Cincinnati, O., May, 1839; he had some fine training in the Lebanon (O.) Normal School; he was a scholar of great ability and untiring industry. schools of his neighborhood and in Carey's Academy, near Cincinnati, O.; attended Cincinnati (O.) Medical College and graduated from Starling's Medical College, Columbus, O., 1850; in the latter college he occupied for awhile the chair of demonstration of anatomy; m., Oct. 4, 1853, Sarah Maria Lakin, b. April 8, 1829; d. Fayette, Ia., Dec. 5, 1888; daughter of William P. Lakin and Sarah ——; she studied in Clermont Academy. "On account of her gentle Christian ways she left a precious memory in the community where she lived."

"In 1855 Dr. Parker, desiring a wider field of labor, went on horseback from Louisville, Ky., and decided to build his home at Fayette, Ia. The natural beauty of the place attracted him, and its being the seat of Upper Iowa University. This was a struggling school to be helped. For awhile he lectured there on chemistry and anatomy without any hope of pecuniary reward. For 45 years he was a trustee of this school, aiding its growth with a zeal, enthusiasm and singleness of purpose."

The funeral sermon was by Rev. J. L. Paine, and was published by request and widely and eagerly read. It was from the verse which he thought most nearly described the doctor's loving, earnest life. "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, and known and read of all men." The following are among some of the glowing tributes:

"Fifty years ago last December I was teaching in the log school house which stood in the grove hard by the residence of Brother James Robertson, who was one of the directors. According to the custom of that day, the teacher 'boarded round,' and the Robertson home was my first place of entertainment. Dr. Parker and his excellent wife had just arrived, and were staying with Brother Robertson until their own house could be occupied. Amid the freedom of frontier conditions, a week under the same roof furnished an excellent opportunity for intimate acquaintance. I recognized at once the princely character of the man, and his generous nature seemed to reach out and embrace me, and we were close friends at once and ever after.

"Dr. Parker's devotion to his wife attracted my attention and won my admiration from the first. Every degree of tenderness, every measure of affection, was manifest and shown, not by sentimental words, but by kindest action. He was a lover to the last—dignified, but informal, chivalrous and sincere.

"As children came to bless the home the same traits were prominent. Their physical, moral and intellectual well-being were carefully guarded, and no outside interest, however pressing, was permitted to come between him and his family.

"But his solicitude for his family did not stop with them; it reached out to all his acquaintances, and especially to those to whom he ministered professionally. He did not choose his profession merely as a means of worldly gain and promotion, but as offering him the best field in which to exercise his God-given talents and by that exercise to bless humanity. He felt that, having entered this work, responsibility was laid upon him by the Almighty, from which he did not wish nor dare to flinch. Wherever there was a wail of distress, brought to his ear, be it from hovel or palace, with promise of reward or without hope of emolument, by night or by day, in heat or cold, there lay his path of duty and he faltered not.

"I see him now, as memory's picture brings before me those early days, sitting on his little brown mare, plunging into the oncoming darkness, out onto the unfenced and almost trackless prairie. The cry of the afflicted was to him the cry of God. Kindness was in the very warp and woof of his being, and extended to all animals as well as to men.

"Dr. Parker was eminently industrious. He seemed to act upon the conviction that he was debited with sixty minutes of each waking hour, and for each minute thus debited he sought to show a corresponding credit of something worthy accomplished. One day I entered his office and said, 'Dr., if you are not busy, I wish you would look at my arm, though if you are in a hurry I can come in again.' With the trace of a smile coming over his usually grave countenance, he replied, 'I am always busy, but never in a hurry.' It was the key to his busy life and shows how he was able to accomplish so much.

"While carrying a large practice, he found time to study and keep abreast with the very front of his profession, taking part in public enterprises, mingling largely in social life, and cultivating, chiefly with his own hands, vegetable and flower gardens which were the pride and admiration of the city. He once said, 'I never allow a weed to go to seed in my garden.'

"With him a dollar given to better the condition of a fellow being, or a call made to relieve human suffering, though it brought no moneyed return, was not deemed lost. It was so much laid up. He preferred to suffer inconvenience himself rather than to distress another. I remember in a time of great stringency, I was talking with him about his financial affairs. He was in need of money, and I said to him, 'You have a large amount on your books—why not urge collections more vigorously? Your accounts are good, are they not?' And I shall never forget his grave, earnest look; half reproach, half sympathy, as he said, 'Yes, they are nearly all good, sometime, and I am urging those who are in circumstances to pay to do so now. But most of them are very hard pushed just now. I went to them to relieve their suffering, and I cannot bring myself to distress them again unless I am in great personal need.'

"And so when it was said, 'Dr. Parker is dead,' many said with trembling voice and moistened eye, 'Oh, dear old Dr. Parker!' He was thus rich in the truest riches. And the memory of his noble deeds will never fade away."

Many other noble tributes were given by those who had long known Doctor Parker. Dr. J. W. McLean said, "He passed from the ranks of living members of his profession without an enemy, bearing with him the confidence, esteem and love of all who knew him. From an intimate professional association with him of more than twenty years, I can say that I never knew a more noble, pure-minded, unselfish, conscientious physician than he. Anywhere and everywhere among his professional brethren, or at the bedside of the sick, he was always the courteous, sympathetic, Christian gentleman."

(5) Martha Mulloy, b. Litchfield, Me., Feb. 20, 1796; d. Friday, Jan. 2, 1857; buried in Concord Cemetery.

"Martha Mulloy went to Ohio with her brother Thomas. She was a woman of wonderful fortitude and practicality. She and her brother, Thomas Mulloy, were possessed of strong intellectual faculties and deep religious convictions. They were soon leaders in society and the church."

Mrs. Abby C. Hitch, Catawba, Pendleton County, Ky., says: "She died trusting in her Savior. The night before her spirit left the body she insisted that all of us who were watching by her bed should lie down, for she wanted to be alone with the angels. We did not sleep. For some time we could hear her whispering as if she were in conversation or prayer. Then she took a coughing spell. In the morning she passed away to her Heavenly home."

Oct. 13, 1857; he lived on his father's homestead in Topsham, Me., the greater part of his life, and was a very successful farmer and one of the kindest neighbors; he was a man of good intellectual ability, a great lover of books and a well-read man for those days. It was intended that he should enter Bowdoin College, but his health was not considered strong enough for that work; he m., Feb. 11, 1824, Mary Mustard, b. Topsham, Me., Jan. 28, 1799; d. Oakland, Cal., Jan. 15, 1875; daughter of Capt. Charles Mustard and Margaret Fulton.

"Among the sons of Maine who have emigrated to the West to grow up with the new country, and have achieved renown and fortune, was Dixey W. Thompson. At twenty years of age he adopted the seafaring life, and rose from the lowest grade to be commander of one of the finest ships that sailed on the Kennebec River of Maine. His first venture was in the ship Richmond, with Capt. Mustard of Brunswick, Me., the ship having been built at Richmond, Me., himself becoming shipowner and manager in his eventful career in after life. When the 'California fever' broke out he retired from the sea and became a '49er. He crossed the Isthmus of Panama. Arriving in San Francisco, Dec. 28, 1849, he joined in the following summer a party of Maine men in an unsuccessful mining venture at Marysville. Finding employment in San Francisco not to his taste, he took to the sea again, and in course of time, 1852-57, commanded several vessels, employed mostly in the cotton trade, a lucrative service in those days. He finally purchased the Sophia, in commerce between Santa Barbara Islands and the mainland. Then, with his indomitable enterprise, he turned his attention to the acquisition of real estate in that section of California which comprises the rich counties of Santa Barbara and Ventura. Among his purchases were some 300 acres west of Santa Barbara and adjoining Ventura City, and extending several miles along the coast below that city. Within the borders of these two counties he owned and cultivated the largest bean ranch in the world, covering 2,300 acres of the richest land in California, and for which he once refused the offer of half a million of dollars. The utilizing of his landed possessions required the use of a hundred horses and supported 150 dairy cows.

"Dixey W. Thompson was also the extensive owner of city property in Santa Barbara, upon which notable improvements were constantly in progress. The captain's popular reputation extended all through the state and far beyond its boundaries, not only as a man of affairs, but as a pioneer of California. With a chivalrous trait of character, he was noted for genial and open hospitality, and was almost always foremost in entertaining distinguished guests whose steps led them to the gates of Santa Barbara. A marked trait of his private life was open-hearted generosity, and he never failed in his practical aid to the unfortunate whose wants came to his knowledge. He often gave employment to working men in times of business depression, when the work gave him but the slightest profit. Quietly and heartily he did all such work.

"In Captain Thompson's stable of fine horses was his favorite Tecumseh, on which he rode on his silver saddle. When any civic parade was held in any large California city he and his steed were in earnest request. When he could accept such invitations he formed a notable feature in the processions in the last ten years of his life.

"Although 75 years of age when he passed away in his Santa Barbara home, he had been a vigorous man until a fatal disease seized him. At the time of his death he was the well-known owner of the San Miguel Rancho, of 2,500 acres, which joins Ventura on the east. His Santa Barbara interests included 300 acres of land west of that city, a half block on Chaplin Street, a half block on State Street, opposite the post office.

"While landlord of the Arlington he was very popular. In those early times there were no railways, and the steamships called only on specified days. It was rather hard to provide amusement in a dull, small, and very peculiar town that had hardly learned its place on the map. But Captain Thompson could organize a series of specialties that were so new and interesting to visitors from such cities as New York and Boston, that their fame is not yet dim. He offered his guests free trips to the great ranches, gave them picnics in the wonderfully beautiful cañons, had Spanish dances in the royal parlors and fine feats of horsemanship by Californian riders on the hotel grounds. The drowsy, soft music of the violin and the guitar became the fad, and the daredevil riding of the vaqueros was an eye-opener to the Eastern tourists. Presents of flowers and fruits were unostentatiously but frequently made. Old legends were rehearsed. So, notwithstanding the mails were often delayed two weeks, time flew fast and the days were very pleasant.

"But, in the midst of all his marvellous successes in the far West, his loyalty to his Pine Tree State never waned. Thither he returned to wed his gifted and kind-hearted wife, and in scores of other ways he showed that he still tenderly loved his home town by the Androscoggin. In return, Topsham was full of love and pride for this her noble son."

(7) Sarah Purinton Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., July 2, 1837; d. Bangor, Me., July 21, 1905.

"She was educated at Pittsfield, Mass., where she attended the Maplewood School, conducted by Doctor Agnew, a noted educator of his day. She left there in 1855 to attend the Hubbard School at Hanover, N. H., where she remained until 1856. An intimate friend of those days wrote of her: 'She was a rarely beautiful girl. Her sweet disposition, gentle ways and pure character, made her a general favorite. She naturally drew people to her, and all her schoolmates who knew her intimately, sought her when in trouble. She soothed and encouraged them. She was always genuine and sincere, and was governed by a loving heart such as few possessed. She was naturally retiring in disposition, but her natural qualities and her firm adherence to principle made her very nearly the central figure of her school life. The instructors were fond of her. She was a conscientious pupil. She had good judgment and good reasoning powers. Her intuitions were marked. She had very remarkable powers for the reading of character; but her strongest characteristic was her sweetness of disposition, which made her loved by all who knew her. The child was the mother of the woman.'"

She m. Gen. Charles Hamlin of Bangor, Me., whom she had known as a student in Bowdoin College, where he graduated in 1857. They met when they were scarcely more than sixteen years old. They were soon engaged. Their married life of forty-five years was a perfect union. In early life she began to lose her hearing, and in her last years she was totally deaf. This was the only cloud on her life. But of this no one ever heard her utter a word of murmuring or complaint. She accepted her affliction in a truly Christian spirit. It served to intensify her great devotion to her family. While she was in retirement she had a very large circle of the most devoted friends. She followed the different members of her family with unusual interest and judgment through their various occupations in law, drama, medicine, engineering and business, and she often gave them advice which evidenced rare good sense and taste. She was a very faithful member of the Unitarian Church. M., Nov. 28, 1860, Gen. Charles Hamlin, and settled in Bangor, Me., soon after the Civil War. "My grandfather, Lemuel Thompson, when a young man, came to Topsham, most of the way by spotted trees, distance of about sixty miles. He passed over this route, barefooted, in one day. His shoes were tied in a bundle with his axe and a few clothes. His cash capital was twenty-five cents. With a brave heart he at once took up some wild land at Topsham, out of which he made a valuable farm. It was four miles from Topsham (Me.) Falls, and there he spent all his days. The house which he built is still standing and is occupied by Mr. Charles Barnes. Lemuel Thompson gathered a good property by his honesty and industry, and owned quite a good deal of shipping, etc. He gave his farm to his son, Lewis, with whom he lived in his last days."

(6) Capt. Isaac Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., May 10, 1797; d. July 4, 1848 (51y.). He was commander of the Topsham military company for several years; when a young man he was a very successful school teacher. Mr. Jellison, one of his pupils, said: "Our school had the reputation of being a hard one; several teachers had to leave on account of the unruly conduct of some of the larger boys. When Isaac Thompson took charge of the school there were several scholars much larger than himself. Pretty soon the boys began to snowball the schoolhouse; the teacher told them not to do it again, as he would punish the first one who disobeyed. He went to his boarding house to dinner; when he came back all the larger boys and some of the smaller ones, were snowballing the schoolhouse at a great rate; he called the school to order and requested some of the smaller scholars to bring in some stout birch sticks; he then invited two of the larger boys to stand in the floor; he began with the largest boy and applied to him the birch rod until he had handsomely promised to obey all the rules of the school. He gave the same medicine to all the boys who had been engaged in the mischief, being most severe with the larger ones. The whole neighborhood was elated over this victory. The scholars all soon learned to love as well as they feared their faithful teacher; they made rapid progress in their studies, and the school was a very profitable one. The boys who had been the leaders in disobedience became lifelong friends of Mr. Thompson, who taught in that school for several terms. He bought land next to his brother's and was a very successful farmer. He and his wife were very faithful members of the Topsham (Me.) Baptist Church." M., Sept. 17, 1824, Jane E. Wyer, b. (8) Mary Thompson; d. March, 1864.

(8) Thomas Curtis Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., Oct. 4, 1861; resides South Fayette, Me., P. O. box 38, Wayne, Me. "When I was a very small boy my parents moved to Lewiston, Me. I was in the public schools until I was 18 years old. I had a desire to 'see the world.' I went from Boston to the West Indies, where the Am. Consul secured me a responsible position as engineer with a R. R. Co., with Keith & Wilson, who represented an English Syndicate which was constructing roads in Central America.

Four years in that most interesting country were passed in novel experiences. I was then a sailor on the Pacific for several years, touching at South American and foreign ports. At Point Lemon, on the coast of Central America, I went ashore with the captain to transact some business. We were attacked by a band of Indians who were in rebellion at the time. We fled for our lives. On reaching the shore we found that our boat and crew had gone. They had been fired on, but had escaped to the ship, thinking that we were safe in the town. There are no docks at this port, and the ships are obliged to anchor far out from shore, lighters being used in the shallow water. Just as we reached the water's edge, Capt. George Lyford was shot by the pursuing Indians, but we both leaped into the water and attempted to swim to the ship. We were but a little ways out when the captain gave a cry, threw up his arms, and began to sink. I swam to his rescue and secured a floating plank some distance away, and put him upon it. We pushed out to sea amid a shower of bullets, and reached the ship much exhausted. When we got on board we found that we were bleeding profusely from our many wounds. I had received two bullets in the upper part of my body, of which I still bear the ugly scars. We were well taken care of by our good surgeon, Dr. Bird of Philadelphia. At New Orleans I left the ship and traveled through the length and breadth of the U. S. and Canada. One day at Tacoma, Wash., I met an old acquaintance from Maine, and that evening I longed to see my home again. In due time I reached Lewiston, Me. I entered the cotton mills and made myself proficient in all the departments where I worked. I then became Supt. of the bag department of the Victoria Mills, Newburyport, Mass. After awhile I returned to Maine, where I have remained ever since. In all my wanderings I held fast to my boyish love for the girl who is now my wife." Mr. Thompson is tall and straight, with a very muscular frame, dislikes a crowd, and takes great pleasure in the hunting and fishing in which he is always so successful. (7) Isaac Newton Thompson, b. Topsham, Me., Sept. 11, 1833; d. Brunswick, Me., July 11, 1904 (70y., 10m.). "In 1854 he was in the milk business in Boston, Mass. About a year later he moved to Bowdoin, Me., where for 19 years he carried on the large farm which he had purchased. In Bowdoin he was ever regarded as one of the prominent citizens. He served on the board of selectmen for several years. He was chairman of that board when he left Bowdoin in 1874. He then lived in Webster and Greene, Me. He moved to Brunswick,

Me., about 1894. Here he did a large business in mowing machines, which he sold for over 35 years. For some time he had charge of a large territory as agent for the McCormick Harvester Co., of Chicago, Ill. He won one of the four prizes offered to New England agents who sold the largest number of machines in one season. They gave him a free trip to the St. Louis Exposition. He was a wonderfully energetic and successful man, and this was in spite of the fact that both his hands were badly crippled when he was an infant, his fingers having been drawn up by some terrible burns. The only two fingers which were saved from this early accident were lost in a machine later on in life. He had the genuine Thompson grit, and this and his shrewdness and ability overcame all obstacles in his way." He helped greatly in the writing of the Thompson history, and all that he sent was neatly and clearly written. M., in Topsham, Me., Oct. 24, 1854. Betsy Jane Jones, who d. July 22, 1874; farmer; son of John Mower and Elizabeth ——. One wrote of Lydia (Thompson) Mower a few years ago: "Each day finds her busy with her work and taking an active interest in the affairs of the day. During the past year her busy hands have completed ten large bed quilts and more would have followed if the patchwork had held out. Many friends have received gifts of stockings and mittens from her hands, and she has assisted in the housework and the making of clothes for relatives. She said: 'I should be miserable if I did no work, and I spend the greater part of my time in sewing. I had rather do it than anything else.' Her needlework is perfection. Mrs. Mower said: 'My father, Lemuel Thompson, owned the first carriage ever brought into Topsham, Me. It was rather a crude affair, having a high box seat and fender, with straight shafts and wooden springs, yet it was the envy of all. It was greatly admired, though it was a decidedly hard vehicle for riding as compared with the vehicles of the present day. When I was a girl it was rather hard for children to get shoes to wear, and the cost, and the limited amount of money in circulation, cut down our supply so that one pair had to last for a long time. In summer time, to save expense, we walked to school in our bare feet, and except on Sunday to church and to other prominent gatherings, seldom wore our shoes. Churches were not very plenty and the nearest one to my father's was four miles, and we all walked there on Sunday. The older people usually went on horseback. Often in days gone by have I rode on the rump of the horse while I held with one hand to the crupper-strap and with the other to the waist of my mother's dress. When we walked to church we did not put on our shoes and stockings until we came near the place of service, and they were carried in a bundle when we went home. In those early days we used flint instead of matches, and the punk and tow prevailed. We never dared to let the fires on the hearths go out, because it was so hard to light them again with the flint and punk. Sometimes we went to a neighbor's with the tongs and in these bore home a coal of fire. It was hard to make the tallow candles before the moulds for them came into use.'

We took pieces of wick and dipped them in the hot tallow, allowing them to drip a bit, and then with each dripping they could be held in the cool of the cellar to harden. This was rather a slow process, but we thus got quite a fair-shaped candle. White bread was somewhat scarce in those days, but afterwards became very common. Bread was made from buttermilk. Soda was not very plenty then, and when we got out of the powder we used a preparation made of corn cobs, which was made by burning the corn and cobs to ashes and then adding water to make a lye, which, after straining, was to all intents and purposes as good to raise a batch of bread as the best soda in the market. Sometimes we used hardwood ashes for liquid soda, but it did not prove so satisfactory as the other kind. Pastry was limited, and cakes and pies were not used much except when company was around. Our cooking was all done over the fire-place, and pork, beans, potatoes, Indian meal pudding and bread, constituted the common bill of fare. The potatoes were boiled in a kettle suspended from a crane over the fire, so that it could be swung in and out as the cook desired. Meat was fried in a long-handled spider or frying pan held over the roaring flames. While the cooking was primitive, I have never been able to find anything which would excel the suet cakes which were cooked by my mother in the old Dutch oven. The children never tired of those cakes, and mother always had some of them ready for us when we came home from school at night."

APPENDIX.

THE ANCESTRY OF REV. DANIEL PARKER, RECORDS OF HALLIDAY FAMILY AND OTHERS CONNECTED WITH THE PARKERS.

Much of this is from a pamphlet written by Eben A. Parker, a member of the bar at Indianapolis, Ind. It was read at the semi-centennial anniversary of Clermont Academy. Much of the data was sent by Mrs. S. C. Davis and by Miss Julia P. Cutler of Marietta, Ohio, daughters of Judge Ephraim Cutler.

About 1644 there came to America from Wiltshire, England, five Parker brothers—Abraham, Jacob, James, Joseph and John. They first settled at Woburn, Mass.; they belonged to a family of distinction in England, and bore with them a coat of arms and a crest, evidences of military renown. The coat of arms was kept through four generations and then lost. Heraldic description, “He beareth party perpale, or sable, on a chevron, gules, three bucks’ heads between three amulets; the name Parker. The Parker crest is a knight’s head, the helmet with the visor closed.” The three amulets charged on the shield are marks of distinction conferred on the fifth son.

Abraham and James Parker were farmers. All of these five Parker brothers were men of consideration in that early time, and some held positions of trust and honor. In 1660 James Parker was appointed by the town commissioners to treat with the Indians, and, with others, to set off land adjoining Chelmsford for one of the tribes. In 1663 he was appointed sergeant in a military company for home protection. In 1673, with others, he petitioned the court to lay out and settle a plantation adjoining the town, and to set aside 500 acres of land for the maintenance of an orthodox minister.

- (1) Abraham Parker. He was admitted as a freeman in 1645; in 1653, with his brothers, except John Parker, who settled in Andover, Mass., he moved from Woburn, Mass., to Chelmsford, Mass. In Woburn, Mass., Nov. 18, 1644, he m. Rose Whitlock.
- (2) Jacob Parker; d. Chelmsford, Mass., 1669; he had nine children; his widow, Sarah, presented an inventory of his estate to the court April 6, 1669. (She m. [second], Aug. 4, 1675, Capt. John Waite of Malden, Mass., a leader in civil and religious life; he represented his town in the House of Deputies for eighteen years; he was speaker of the House in 1664. Sarah d. Jan. 13, 1707 [81y.].)
- (3) Jacob Parker, b. Chelmsford, Mass., 1652; d. Malden, Mass., Oct. 31, 1694.
- (3) Sarah Parker, b. Chelmsford, Mass., Jan. 14, 1654; d. July 1, 1678. She was the second wife of Nathaniel Howard of Charlestown, Mass.
- (3) Thomas Parker, b. Chelmsford, Mass., March 28, 1756; d. Malden, Mass. (79y.). He is said to have built the old Parker mansion on the old homestead where he died. This homestead is one of Malden's historic spots. His widow, Rebecca, d. Dec. 20, 1758 (75y.).
- (4) Rebecca Parker, b. Oct. 31, 1705; d. young.
- (4) Thomas Parker, b. Oct. 31, 1705; m., April 5, 1731, Mary Upham.
- (4) Jacob Parker, b. Jan. 9, 1707.

John Upham, b. England, 1597; settled in Weymouth, Mass.; buried in Malden, Mass., where his gravestone bears the inscription: "Here lies the body of John Upham, age 84 years. He died Feb. 25, 1861. He was the first inhabitant of New England who bore the name of Upham." Lieut. Phineas Upham<sup>2</sup>; d. Oct., 1676, of wounds received at the battle of Canonicus, the Narragansett fort; he m. Ruth Wood; John Upham<sup>3</sup>; Samuel Upham<sup>4</sup>, who m. Mary Grover.)
- (5) Mary Parker, b. May 26, 1741; d. young.
- (5) Rebecca Parker, b. Nov. 18, 1742; d. Oct. 13, 1819.

(5) William Parker, b. June 10, 1745; d. Nov. 26, 1825; m., Jan. 28, 1772, Mary Warner<sup>2</sup>, b. Feb. 5, 1752; d. Feb. 17, 1811. Her Warner ancestry: (1) William Warner, who came from England and settled in Ipswich, Mass., 1637, and d. 1648; (2) Elder Philemon Warner of Gloucester, Mass., who m. Elizabeth Woodward; (3) Daniel Warner; (4) Elder Philemon Warner.) This William Parker settled in Newburyport, Mass., where he and his wife became members of the Presbyterian Church, under the ministration of the renowned Jonathan Parsons and John Murray. William Parker was a man of uprightness and Christian character. A cabinet maker by trade, he manufactured furniture and exported it to the West Indies, where it found a profitable market. He thus not only secured a competency for himself and family but had a surplus from which he purchased, in 1787, a share of 1,173 acres of land in what was then known as the "Ohio Company's Purchase." This company was formed of such men as Gen Rufus Putnam of Revolutionary renown, with Rev Manassah Cutler, of civic and religious distinction. In 1788 William Parker traveled to his possessions in the West. Truly this was a great struggle to leave behind the kindred, and the higher civilization and refinement which was fast gathering around them, for the happiness and betterment of the young and interesting family. The hardships and privations which attended their movements were not so keenly felt upon the journey as when, on arriving at western Pennsylvania, no habitation could be found to live in except a sheep pen which the sturdy pioneer who had preceded him permitted him to move his family into, as the sheep were driven out, and in which the Parker family was sick for a month. The Indian wars prevented William Parker's forward movement from this place. He purchased a small farm in the forks of the "Yough," where he remained until 1800. Then, on a flatboat, he navigated the Ohio River to the land he had purchased on Leading Creek, in Meigs County, O. On arriving there he found the unbroken forest in all its grandeur and loveliness. The family remained on the flat-boat until a cabin was built.

THE HALLIDAY RECORDS

- (1) Alexander Halliday and his wife, Jean Halliday, whose parents were not relatives, lived in Auchencairn, Parish of Kirkmaloe, County of Dumfries, Scotland. Alexander Halliday died in Scotland.
- (2) Samuel Halliday, the second son, b. Scotland, Oct. 17, 1799; d. Aug. 25, 1880; he graduated from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland; he immigrated from Scotland to America, May 19, 1818; Aug. 19, 1818, he stopped in Rutland, Meigs (then Gallia) County, O. His mother, with six other sons, followed two years later and settled in the same county; these sons all married and raised families. In 1906 there were 300 living descendants of the mother, Jean Halliday, scattered in many states west of Ohio. The descendants of Samuel Halliday are ninety. "The Halliday Clan was so numerous in Scotland that the family has not been much traced beyond two generations beyond Alexander Halliday." The coat of arms was copied from one found in the study of Sir Walter Scott. "There are other Hallidays in America, but this family has not traced them to the first ancestors in America, or to a Scotch ancestor." Samuel Halliday m. (first), April 7, 1822, Eliza Parker, b. Rutland, Meigs County, O., April 7, 1805; d. Feb. 18, 1861; daughter of William Parker<sup>a</sup> and Betsy Wyatt; m. (second), April 29, 1866, Mrs. Jeannett Braley, nee McKnight, b.
